AIR FORCE WILL LOSE MANPOWER FOR YEAR UNDER NEW PROGRAM

Reduction Planned in Effort to Level Training Load — Strength to Grow to Maximum in 1959.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 (UP) — The Air Force, the one service supposed to increase its manpower strength under the Administration's "new look" military plans, actually will lose strength over the next year, officials disclosed today.

It is not because the Air Force could not use these men or can not get them through recruitment.

Rather the reduction is part of what Air Force officials described as a four-year program to level off sharp and expensive fluctuations in the Air Force's training load.

To make up for the lack of military personnel, the Air Force will hire civilians as substitutes under a program given the code name "operation home front."

Full Strength in 1959. Under recently approved manpower plans, the Air Force will not reach its authorized ceiling strength of 975,000 men until mid-1959. This goal originally was to have been attained in mid-1957. At the same time the Air Force will reach its build-up objective of 137 wings.

The Air Force, which reached a strength of 966,400 men a year ago and has about 955,000 men now, is scheduled to drop to 934,000 men in the middle of next year. It then will start a slow climb to the goal of 975,000 men, reaching 954,000 in mid-1957, 970,000 in mid-1958, and final 975,000 men in mid-1959.

But Maj. Gen. Kenneth B. Hobson, director of manpower for operations, gave assurances today that the combat wings will not suffer for lack of manpower.

Hobson said in an interview that the field force actually will pick up strength in the coming year as more men are freed from training duties. By 1957, he said, the field forces may be short about 10,000 men, but this shortage can be made up through civilian employment or by tightening manpower requirements.

9000 Civilians Hired. The Air Force already has hired 9000 civilian substitutes under Operation Homefront and plans to hire another 32,000 in the current fiscal year.

Hobson said reduction in Air Force strength results from a decision to stabilize the training load by leveling off the number of men being recruited. The quota currently is 10,000 recruits a month.

The Air Force was faced with this particular manpower problem because about 275,000 men who enlisted after the outbreak of the Korean war are becoming eligible to leave the service this fiscal year.

To replace these men and will meet the original objective of 975,000 men by mid-1957 would have meant an expanded and expensive training program. The Air Force decided instead to stretch out the training of replacements and hope that re-enlistments would increase to forestall too sharp a drop in over-all strength.

WORKERS USE PART OF PAY TO AVERT WILDCAT STRIKES

DETROIT, Oct. 17 (AP) — Workers at United States Rubber Co.'s Detroit plant voted yesterday to spend part of a pay rise on a plan to head off wildcat strikes.

Under the unusual setup, nine full-time union representatives will be hired to iron out any company-union differences before they lead to walkouts.

The nine now are CIO United Rubber Workers committeemen. Their pay will come out of an increase of a penny and a half-mill granted recently under a new contract. The company stipulated that union members could split this part of the rise as they see fit.

The other half of the penny and half-mill increase will be used to eliminate wage inequities, a URW spokesman said.

"With nine men in each division on the job to police the contract and settle disputes as they should be settled under the contract," he added, "we should be able to halt illegal stoppages."

The plant, employing 6000 union workers, has been hit by a series of wildcat strikes in recent months.

RUSSIANS SEEING AMERICA THROUGH NEWS REELS ON TV

LONDON, Oct. 17 (AP) — Moscow radio reported today that American news reels are becoming popular with Soviet television audiences as a substitute for seeing the United States in person.

"We get a lot of letters and telephone calls saying how interesting they are," reported Valentina Sharoyeva, director of the central Soviet television studio.

The Soviets and the Telenev Corp. of America agreed last month to exchange news reels films. Showings in Russia so far have included shots of the Soviet agricultural delegation on tour in the United States, the Shakespearean festival at Stratford, Conn., the lumbermen's carnival in Cherry Springs, Pa., and a rodeo in Los Angeles.

Margaret and Townsend Dine In London After Country Visit

PRINCESS MARGARET, unsmiling and tense, returning to Allanby Hall after attending church services yesterday. Group Capt. Peter Townsend, also weekending at the country estate of Mrs. John Lyet Wills, the Princess's cousin, did not accompany Margaret to church.

Increasing Opposition to Their Marriage Reported in Royal Circles, Some Sections of Church of England.

LONDON, Oct. 17 (UP) — Princess Margaret went out to dine with Peter Townsend again tonight after their return from a weekend in Windsor.

The Princess and Townsend met for dinner at the Victoria road home of one of her former escorts, Mark Bonham Carter.

LONDON, Oct. 17 (AP) — Princess Margaret returned to London today from a weekend in the country with Peter Townsend amid reports of increasing opposition to their marriage in royal circles and some sections of the Church of England.

Hundreds of Londoners waiting at the gate got only a fleeting glimpse of the princess as she drove into the Clarence House grounds in a Rolls-Royce, accompanied by her lady in waiting, Lady Iris Peake, and her bodyguard, detective Fred Crocker. Only a few minutes earlier, the Queen Mother had returned from Windsor Castle.

Townsend returned later in the day to the home of the Marquis of Abergavenny in Lowndes square where he is a guest during his leave from his post in Belgium.

There still was no official word on whether the Queen's sister and the handsome Air Force hero will marry — although millions of Britons are convinced they will.

The Duke of Edinburgh, husband of Queen Elizabeth II, was said to be counseling strongly against a union between the 25-year-old royal beauty and the divorced Royal Air Force hero, who will be 41 next month.

One newspaper quoted 83-year-old Princess Marie Louise, a granddaughter of Queen Victoria, as saying such a marriage would be unthinkable.

There were unconfirmed rumors that the Archbishop of Canterbury, the top prelate of the established Church of England, would voice his disapproval publicly if the supposed engagement is made official.

Members of the Anglican clergy began choosing sides. Some were willing to perform a Margaret-Townsend ceremony. Others said "no" in view of the church hierarchy's stand against the remarriage of divorced persons whose former mates are still alive.

The Daily Sketch called for an immediate statement by the archbishop. The church's position, said the Conservative tabloid, "must be made clear before any step is taken that cannot be retraced."

Margaret and Townsend, after a weekend together at the Berkshire country home of her cousin, Mrs. John Wills, departed separately. Asked again by reporters as he left about marriage plans, Townsend replied: "These questions are getting to be a bit of a bore."

Margaret and Mrs. Wills interrupted the visit with Townsend to attend church with the Queen Mother at Windsor Castle's royal chapel. Unsmiling and tense, Margaret omitted her customary waves and smiles as she drove past the crowd of 400 curious waiting near the Wills home.

Townsend went for an early morning horseback ride today. To newspaper men's questions about the romance, he replied sharply: "Leave it, will you?"

A servant at the Wills' forest lodge said Princess Margaret had ordered breakfast in bed.

"Have you had a pleasant weekend?" Townsend was asked by a reporter when he returned from his ride.

"Yes," the handsome air hero replied, "a very pleasant one."

"Have you changed your plans?" another newspaper man asked.

"No," Townsend replied, then after some hesitation, "No, I haven't changed my plans because I haven't any plans."

The Sunday newspaper The People cautioned its readers that assuming the marriage had been arranged was "a big mistake."

The Sunday newspaper The People cautioned its readers that assuming the marriage had been arranged was "a big mistake."

... Her friends in the court circle... say that the meetings of the last few days are nothing more than a royal way of enabling her to say goodbye to an old friend of the family," the paper asserted.

Townsend's mother, Mrs. Gladys Townsend, was missing all weekend from her cottage in Somerset, near Stogumber. Some people deduced she had been smuggled into the Wills home for a talk with Margaret.

Speculation also centered on Dr. John Lamb, chaplain to the royal family. Scotland, who lunched with the Queen yesterday at Balmoral Castle. He is a member of the Church of Scotland, which has no bar on remarriage of divorced persons.

The Queen leaves Balmoral for London tonight with her children, Prince Charles and Princess Anne. Wednesday night she, the Duke of Edinburgh, the Queen Mother and Margaret are having dinner with the Archbishop of Canterbury after a service rededicating the bomb-damaged chapel of the archbishop's London home, Lambeth Palace.

ANOTHER REPORT OF AMERICAN HELD IN RUSSIA

German Returnees Tell of Lieutenant From Chicago—No Record in Army.

HEIDELBERG, Germany, Oct. 17 (AP) — The United States Army checked its files today for clues to a mystery American reported in a Soviet prison camp.

Army headquarters here said it had no record of Lt. Eugene Stanley Fabian, 36 years old, of Chicago but suggested he might have been with United States forces in Austria. Those records were sent to the Department of the Army in Washington in the windup of the American occupation.

German prisoners released from the Soviet Union reported at the Camp Friedland reception center yesterday that Fabian said Soviet agents had seized him in 1947 in Austria, where he was serving in the Army Counterintelligence Corps. He claimed the Russians had sentenced him to 25 years' imprisonment as a spy.

The returnees said the American was at Camp Shurbayur, in the Karaganda desert of Central Asia, until last April but later sent a card to a German prisoner saying he had been transferred to Petropavlovsk, another prison camp in Central Asia, and hoped to be "going home soon."

A slave labor revolt by 2500 men and 3500 women in three prison camps at Kirov, in desert Kazakhstan, for six weeks last year was also disclosed as nearly 1500 Germans reached the Bonn Republic within 24 hours.

"Never before have foreign and Russian slave workers challenged the Soviet power for so long a time," said Karl Paffen, 50, of Cologne. "Then Army forces with tanks arrived and wiped out resistance. The camp I was in had 300 dead."

Another ex-prisoner also reported having seen Mrs. Erika Field, Wallach, German-born adopted daughter of former State Department employee Noel Field and wife of an American Army veteran. Mrs. Wallach disappeared in East Berlin in 1950 after the Communists had secretly arrested her foster father, his wife Herta and his brother Hermann as American double agents.

The three Fields were released last year. A returning German woman reported she had been with Mrs. Wallach in the Vorkuta slave labor camp in Arctic Russia from 1953 until a few weeks ago.

Dr. Walter Linse, an official of the anti-Communist Free Jurists organization in West Berlin, abducted in 1952, was reported to be a prisoner also. The Russians have repeatedly denied knowledge of his whereabouts, despite Western protests. A German returnee said Linse had been seen at Brest-Litovsk in 1954 on his way to forced labor in Russia, after being jailed in East Berlin two years.

ISRAELIS CHASED BACK BY GUNFIRE, EGYPTIANS SAY

Cairo Asserts Enemy Force Accompanied by Truce Cars Refused to Halt.

CAIRO, Oct. 17 (UP) — A military spokesman said today an Israeli force crossed the border into Egypt and was driven back by Egyptian gunfire yesterday.

The spokesman said the Israelis approached the border from the El Auja demilitarized zone, accompanied by two United Nations truce automobiles, and ignored an Egyptian warning to stop.

The spokesman said an Egyptian outpost opened fire after the Israeli force crossed the border. The Israelis were forced to withdraw, he said.

In Tel Aviv, Israeli army spokesman Col. Nehemia Brosh announced that two U.N. truce observers were fired on from Egyptian positions while they were in Israeli territory near the El Auja demilitarized zone.

Brosh said the two observers had to abandon their automobiles and return on foot to El Auja police station.

In Jerusalem, a United Nations spokesman said an official protest had been sent to the Egyptian delegation of the Mixed Armistice Commission over the incident. He said the U.N. observers were in Israeli territory investigating an Egyptian complaint that Israeli was maintaining troops in the demilitarized zone.

There was no mention of casualties on either side. The Egyptian spokesman charged that Israeli still was maintaining forces disguised as policemen or civilians inside the El Auja demilitarized zone in violation of an agreement negotiated by Maj. Gen. E. L. M. Burns, chief U.N. truce supervisor.

Informal sources here said Egypt and Syria were taking increased military precautions because of bitter Israeli reaction over Egypt's arms deal with Czechoslovakia.

They said Egyptian and Syrian motorized reconnaissance patrols were moving along Israeli borders while military camps close to the frontiers were on constant alert.

Egypt's agreement to buy arms from Czechoslovakia gained strong support from one Arab leader, Crown Prince Feisal, Saudi-Arabian premier, said in an interview yesterday the controversy had united the whole Arab world in strong resentment against the West.

Feisal warned the United States and Britain that the opposition to the deal would gain them nothing.

"The artificial uproar which the Americans and the British raised over the deal prompted Premier Nasser to expose his long fruitless efforts to obtain arms from the Western powers while they supplied weapons to Israel," the Crown Prince said.

French Install Morocco Chiefs As Regents, Dissent Voiced

Action Displeases Both Nationalists and Settlers — Terrorism in Protectorate Continues.

RABAT, Morocco, Oct. 17 (UP) — France installed four white-headed Moroccan leaders as a throne council today in a move that pleased neither the nationalists nor the die-hard French settlers who warned of violence to come.

The throne council promised a new democratic era for the protectorate and said its first task would be to form a representative government to define the permanent links between France and Morocco.

While the 108-year-old Grand Vizier of Morocco was reading the proclamation in the Imperial Palace's hall of the viziers, acts of terrorism were reported throughout Morocco, and Frenchmen and Moslems were still killing each other in the Rif mountains.

Major Faure Move. Installation of the throne council was a major move by Premier Faure to save his government in the bitter National Assembly debate at home which comes to a climax tomorrow afternoon when Faure has posed a vote of confidence.

The North African situation was snarled further by a quarrel with Spain and a charge by Resident General Pierre Boyer de Latour that French troops were fired on last week from Spanish Morocco.

The Associated Press reported that a Spanish War Ministry official denied the French charges and said Spain had protested in Paris and Rabat against French attacks on Spanish posts. In one strafing attack by a French plane near the Bou Zineb enclave Oct. 3, he said, four Spanish soldiers were wounded.

Faure was pinning hope of bringing peace to the Moroccan protectorate on the throne council which will replace two rival sultans ousted by the French—Sidi Mohammed Ben Youssef two years ago and Sidi Mohammed Ben Moulay Arafat two weeks ago.

A warning of French trouble came from the Presence Française, the extreme right-wing movement of French settlers who claim the throne council is illegal and that only bloodshed can result.

Formation of the council brought a howl of protest from the nationalists who said inclusion of a fourth man would weigh the scales in favor of the French settlers. Originally Faure planned a three-man council and this had nationalist backing.

Council Members. The council was composed of Grand Vizier Mohammed El Mokri, a traditionalist reported to be 108 years old; nationalist leader Si Bekkai, Si Tahar Ouassou, Said of Ait Alham.

STASSEN PRODS REDS FOR REPLY ON INSPECTION

Russia's Sobolev Says He Feels Differences on Disarmament Have Narrowed.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17 (AP) — Harold E. Stassen, presidential assistant on disarmament, last night nudged Russia's United Nations chief to give a reply soon to President Eisenhower's plan for mutual air inspection.

Both Stassen and Arkady A. Sobolev, the Soviet's permanent U.N. delegate, appeared on the platform at the opening session of the annual New York Herald Tribune forum.

Stassen said, "I have several times asked my colleague, Mr. Sobolev, whether the Soviet Union would accept aerial inspection" as part of the President's proposals or as part of a permanent disarmament inspection system.

"I trust," Stassen added, "that he may soon be able to give the world the answer of the Soviet Union."

Sobolev, taking the microphone, did not specifically refer to the international aerial inspection idea, but he said he felt differences on disarmament between the two countries have narrowed.

He said it was unfortunate that the U.N. subcommittee on the subject "could not reach agreement" as yet, but he said Russia believed it possible for some mutually acceptable plan on reducing arms to be worked out.

"The Soviet proposals," he said, "provide for the establishment of control points in large harbors, railroad stations and airfields, the function of which would be to give warning of any dangerous concentration of military forces."

This, he said, would remove the threat of surprise attack. Stassen said it was vital that a disarmament plan be approved soon, because many more countries soon will be producing atomic power, and it will become increasingly easy to hide nuclear munitions.

An atomic war might break out, he said, if smaller countries produce their own nuclear weapons for use in border skirmishes before a general disarmament plan is devised.

Other speakers, before about 1000 persons attending the forum, included Anthony Nutting, head of Britain's U.N. delegation, and Dag Hammarskjöld, U.N. secretary-general.

Flood Victim's Story: 'I Drove Onto the Bridge, It Wasn't There'

Man Breaks Out Window and Swims to Shore — Others Describe Escapes From Raging Waters.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 17 (AP)—Here is the story of the Connecticut flood, told in the words of the people who know it best.

Thomas Godbout, a 41-year-old mechanic from Monroe, who went out to drive his wife back from the inn where she worked as a waitress and never made it: "I crossed over the Center road bridge in Easton and a state cop told me I'd have to take Route 53 in Georgetown."

"When I got there I was stopped. Water was rushing everywhere. I went back over the same road. When I got back in Easton, the bridge I had gotten over half an hour before was washed away, but I couldn't see that."

"I drove onto the bridge but it wasn't there. One third of it was out of the water. I broke the glass on one of the doors on the passenger's side. The water came rushing through it."

"The lights of the car were still on and I could see what I needed to do. That saved me." He went out through the window, waded to shore, and spent the night at a stranger's house.

Mrs. Susan Kelly, 71, swam for her life when the Norwalk river carried away her house. Her husband Tom, 74, and two women roomers were swept away and presumed dead. Mrs. Kelly, from her hospital bed in Norwalk said, "I told my man, Tom, let's get out of here. 'Let me alone, you make me nervous,' he said—you can't tell that man anything. It came so fast we couldn't get out. The car drowned in the kitchen, he couldn't follow us up the stairs. Things kept banging into the house—automobiles, all sort of things crashing down."

"I sat on top of a trunk. My man was standing in the water by a dresser. I said to my man 'there's nothing we can save here. You wouldn't listen to me. I didn't think it was going to be as bad,' he said."

"Suddenly, there was a crash. Everything fell over. The washing machine fell on me. I was in the water. I thought I was drowning. It was down at the bottom. I got hold of a piece of lumber."

"I hollered for help, but no one came. 'I don't know what happened then. Someone got me out somehow. My man must have been hit in the head. They haven't found him, have they?'"

At Redding, Conn., a middle-aged woman, tentatively identified as Mrs. Edward A. Phoenix, clung to a tree in the raging Saugatuck river for six hours — and let go when help was only 20 feet away.

Rescuers said a car carrying a woman and her husband went into the river late last night. The husband was believed drowned.

The woman got out of the car and caught hold of a tree about 500 feet from shore.

Thirty men, accompanied by State Troopers William J. Wallace and Walter Benz, made one attempt after another to reach her. She clung to the tree, illuminated by floodlights from shore.

Two rescuers volunteered to try and reach the woman by boat. The other rescuers held a long rope and tried to guide the boat downstream—it didn't work.

Then Albert Venning, chief of the West Redding volunteer fire department, peeled off most of his clothes. He waded into the cold water in an attempt to swim out and save the woman. The violent water was too much—it didn't work.

Finally rescuers hitched a network of ladders together, guyed by ropes to trees on shore. Hanging on to this, rescuers got 20 feet away.

Then the woman, completely exhausted, let go. She was swept down the river.

Eugene Ward, 13, of Danbury, who was lifted in a sling by a helicopter from his second-floor apartment and dangled over a street six feet deep in floodwaters, then set down on the roof of a supermarket across the street: "I was scared. When the helicopter started to rise I swung toward a telephone pole. At the last moment I cleared. I wouldn't do that again even if I had to."

Mrs. Martin Murphy of Stamford, who drove with her husband onto a bridge in the dark. They didn't see the Noroton river thrashing over the bridge in the pouring rain. "It was very dark and we had just about got onto the bridge when we realized that this wasn't just one of those puddles like the others we'd been going through. 'Almost immediately, the car started to swerve. My husband said: 'We'll have to get out. This is one of those things you read about.'"

"As soon as we were out of the car, the force of the water swept us off our feet. We went tumbling and tossing in the water for 100 yards downstream." She and her husband clung to a tree and were rescued.

BOMB SHELTER TO BE BUILT AT M'DONNELL PLANT

A bomb shelter costing $98,000 will be built under the main administration building of McDonnell Aircraft Corp. at Lambert-St. Louis Field, it became known yesterday.

Plans for the shelter became known when the amount appeared on a list of firms receiving accelerated tax write-offs of the type allowed to companies with defense contracts.

A company spokesman said construction likely would not begin for about six months. The shelter, of reinforced concrete, will be "fairly standard and small," he said, adding that details of exact size and capacity were not available. McDonnell employs about 14,000 persons.

REFUGEE PARTY LEAVES WEST GERMAN COALITION

BONN, Oct. 17 (AP)—The Refugee party, formerly the third largest in Chancellor Adenauer's four-party West German coalition, quit the coalition yesterday over domestic issues. The party will continue to support Adenauer's main foreign policies, including rearmament in NATO and refusal to deal with the East German regime on reunification.

The party's national convention at Kassel confirmed the decision of a majority of its parliamentary deputies last July to quit the Adenauer coalition.

26 HELICOPTERS USED IN FLOOD
RESCUE WORK

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 17 (UP)—Pilots and their helicopters once again have swept grateful Connecticut residents off their feet.

A total of 26 helicopters plucked hundreds of flood victims from danger spots in the weekend floods. In many cases, it was a case of getting out by helicopter or not getting out at all.

The aircraft assisted in one of the biggest mass rescue operations of the weekend—evacuating 500 cold and hungry residents of the village of Georgetown, in the town of Wilton. Practically the entire population was cut off without enough food. They were taken by helicopter and boats to Danbury.

But helicopters weren't the only vehicles used in rescue work. A train was used to save 12 stranded families. At the request of police, the New Haven Railroad sent an engine and caboose into the Indian Well section of Shelton to bring out the families. All roads were blocked.

sonia, Conn., William T. Sheasby, put it:

"There's a limit to the punishment people can take."

Transport was one of the big problems. Scores of roads were blocked and railroads stalled or barely limped along.

Helicopters and amphibious vehicles were used in rescue work, when a New Haven train was stranded overnight with 83 passengers at Wilton, Conn., helicopters airlifted them to safety Sunday.

Connecticut officials said the weekend's damage would not approach the estimated $215,000,000 loss of last August.

One of the hardest hit areas was Ellenville, a Catskill mountain resort in Ulster county.

The Army engineer's office, finishing up a one and three-quarter-million temporary repair project to roads, bridges and creek beds as a result of Hurricane Diane, had shut down its office Saturday morning.

Saturday night Col. John T. O'Neill reopened the office and figured he had a million dollars worth of work ahead of him again.

Highway traffic was disrupted in Westchester county, N.Y., but a survey yesterday indicated major parkways were open or could be bypassed where blocked.

New York City itself escaped serious damage but got a thorough washing. It absorbed 3.78 inches of rain from Friday through last midnight.

Any threat of severe danger appeared to have passed in Pennsylvania, whose northeast corner was badly mauled two months ago.

Residents of Camptown, Pa., a community of 300 persons, returned to their homes yesterday after hurried evacuations Saturday night when several cracks appeared in their dam under pressure from 100 acres of water, in a dam area normally covering only 30 acres.

PRESIDENT SEES WILSON AND MILITARY AIDES

up pace in building the distant early warning radar network in Canada, increased production of the B-52 long-range bomber and some types of fighter planes, pay increases in the armed services and higher prices in such militarily-important fields as steel.

Mr. Eisenhower, Wilson said, gave "his general approval to the way we're going about it" after Wilson outlined the estimates and procedures being used to plan the defense budget. Wilson said his "broad picture" of requirements for 1957 "would be that they will be substantially as they are now or a little higher, and as far as I could tell this seemed reasonable to the President."

The presidential plane, Columbine III, carrying Wilson, Radford and Milton Eisenhower, the President's brother, landed at 11:10 a.m.

The party was greeted by Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams and Press Secretary James C. Hagerty and driven immediately to Fitzsimons Army Hospital, where the President is a patient.

Wilson told reporters he was "glad and greatly encouraged" that Mr. Eisenhower was able to meet with members of his Cabinet. He pointed out that he and Adm. Radford normally meet with the President on Monday mornings in Washington.

Hagerty said the visit of Milton Eisenhower, president of Pennsylvania State University, was for "strictly personal" reasons. It was Dr. Eisenhower's second trip here to see the President.

President on Sundek. Before Wilson and Radford arrived, Mr. Eisenhower was wheeled in his bed to the sundek adjoining his room. Medical corpsmen then lifted the President to an easy chair and he spent 40 minutes enjoying the sunshine from the chair. He was lifted back into bed and wheeled indoors shortly before his visitors arrived.

Hagerty said Mr. Eisenhower would sit up in his chair again this afternoon, the first time he has sat up twice in one day.

The mid-morning medical bulletin said Mr. Eisenhower's condition continued to improve satisfactorily without complications and his pulse and blood pressure were normal. Hagerty said the medical bulletins would omit temperature readings hereafter, since Mr. Eisenhower's temperature has been normal for some time.

On a television interview yesterday, Hagerty said Mr. Eisenhower was "fully in control" of the duties of his office as he prepared for a stepped-up schedule of work and conferences this week. Hagerty said questions about delegating some presidential powers, raised when the President suffered a heart attack Sept. 24, were now "academic."

Interviewed by correspondents on the CBS program "Face the Nation," Hagerty said Mr. Eisenhower was "fully in control" of his office and is carrying out the duties of the President of the United States while he is here in the hospital in Denver.

Hagerty said there was no significance to the wording of a birthday message Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams wrote last Friday on behalf of the White House staff.

"Serene Years." In the message, Adams spoke of the "serene years" that lie ahead for Mr. Eisenhower after his recovery, saying that a birthday gift from his staff, a garden of plants and shrubs for the presidential farm at Gettysburg, Pa., would be a source of pleasure to Mr. Eisenhower.

Asked if that meant that Adams anticipated the President would not seek re-election, Hagerty replied that it "was just a phrase" and added: "Any that lie ahead could be serene."

Hagerty said he was sure that Mr. Eisenhower has not discussed his political plans with any of the officials who have visited him in his hospital room. He told reporters the President had promised him he would be one of the first to know of Mr. Eisenhower's decision for 1956 and that so far the President had said nothing to him about it.

May Take Few Steps Soon.

Hagerty said Mr. Eisenhower's recovery from coronary thrombosis had progressed to the point where the doctors probably will let him take a few steps next week. The President entered his fourth week of convalescence yesterday.

From the time he entered the hospital, Hagerty said, the President has escaped the periods of despondency which often accompany recovery from a heart attack. His "spirits and mood have been excellent" right along, Hagerty said.

"The President is going to be all right," Hagerty predicted. He said he thought Mr. Eisenhower would again be able to play golf when his recovery is complete.

Hagerty ducked most questions referring to Mr. Eisenhower's future plans, when he will leave the hospital, when he will return to Washington. He insisted every report must now be concentrated on getting the President well.

Comments on 'Team.' Hagerty did say he believed the "team" Mr. Eisenhower had set up has functioned "admirably" in the President's illness.

"The Vice President reported, and it is a fact, there are no jealousies or no struggling for power among the members of the Cabinet or Administration," Hagerty said.

He said preparation of the federal budget for the fiscal year 1957, which begins next July 1, was going ahead on schedule and that the budget was not yet ready for presentation to the President.

Mr. Eisenhower, clad in yellow pajamas and wearing a blue bow tie, sat up for 30 minutes yesterday in an easy chair near his bed. It was the second time he had been permitted up.

Gets Report on Flood. While sitting up, he conferred with Adams, who gave him a report on the flood situation in the East.

Later, Hagerty said Mr. Eisenhower would "continue to give the reports and developments from the flooded area his personal attention."

Hagerty said Wilson and Radford would be followed by Secretary of State Dulles, who will arrive tomorrow night and probably see the President Wednesday.

Dulles conferred with Mr. Eisenhower last Tuesday, the first Cabinet member to see him since the President suffered a heart attack Sept. 24. Hagerty said there was "nothing urgent" about Dulles' second visit.

Dulles wants to see Mr. Eisenhower before meeting Thursday with congressional leaders prior to leaving for Big Four Foreign Ministers' conference, which opens at Geneva Oct. 27, Hagerty said. Dulles will leave for Geneva next Saturday.

He will be accompanied by Denver by Dillon Anderson, the President's adviser on national security matters, Hagerty announced. Anderson will confer with Mr. Eisenhower on topics pending before the National Security Council, but a time has not yet been set for the meeting, Hagerty said.

Brownell Coming. Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. will arrive Thursday night and confer with Mr. Eisenhower some time Friday on Justice Department matters, Hagerty said.

On Saturday, Dr. Paul Dudley White, Boston heart specialist who has been the chief consultant on Mr. Eisenhower's condition, is scheduled to return for another weekend check-up. He will be accompanied by Col. Thomas W. Mattingly of Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, another consultant.

Col. Mattingly went back to Washington yesterday with Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey, who saw the President twice—on Saturday and yesterday.

Mattingly's decision to return to Washington for a few days was another indication of the steady progress Mr. Eisenhower has made toward recovery. Saturday the President's physicians skipped his daily electrocardiogram reading the first time.

Hagerty said the cardiogram tracings, which indicate the healing of the heart muscle scar, would be taken at less frequent intervals because the cardiogram picture was "stabilized."

A cardiogram taken yesterday showed the heart picture to be "stable and unchanged from (the President's) previous record," a medical bulletin reported.

Medical corpsmen lifted Mr. Eisenhower from his bed yesterday morning and placed him in the easy chair, where he chatted with Mrs. Eisenhower, Adams and Secretary Humphrey.

Later in the morning his bed was rolled out of his room and he remained outside for 40 minutes. The daily sundek visits began last Monday. Mrs. Eisenhower again accompanied her husband to the sundek.

Humphrey, who discussed economic and fiscal matters with the President, told reporters before leaving yesterday that "the President looked wonderful this morning. He was sitting up in his chair and he was just like old times."

SUPREME COURT UPHOLDS ORDER FREEING PROVVOO

Smith Act convictions of 14 top-ranking state officials of the Communist party in California. The Red leaders, sentenced to five years in prison and fined $10,000 each, claimed there was no evidence at their trial to support the charge that they advocated violent revolution.

3. Granted a hearing to George B. Parr, controversial Texas political leader known as "the duke of Duval county," who has been indicted on income tax evasion charges. Parr claims his rights were violated when his trial was transferred from Laredo, in his own political bailiwick, to the Texas state capital at Austin.

4. Agreed to review the conviction of former New York longshoremen's boss, Joseph P. Ryan, on charges of accepting $2500 from a shipping firm executive. Ryan, president of the Independent Longshoremen's Union that was expelled from the AFL on racketeering grounds, claims he was convicted under a clause of the Taft-Hartley Law that doesn't apply to his case.

United States Judge Roszel C. Thomsen of Baltimore ordered Provoo released last March, holding that he could not have a fair trial "at this late date."

He said that Provoo had been denied his constitutional right to a speedy trial. At the time Provoo had been in custody for five and one-half years waiting trial.

Justice Clark, former Attorney General, took no part in the Supreme Court's decision.

Provoo was accused of seven treasonable acts, including a charge that in 1942 he reported a fellow prisoner of war, Capt. Burton C. Thomson, to the Japanese as unco-operative and anti-Japanese. The Government said this report was responsible for Thomson's execution.

Provoo was convicted of treason in 1953 after a trial in the United States district court in New York City and sentenced to life imprisonment. However, the United States court of appeals in New York reversed the conviction, ruling there was improper cross-examination relating to homosexuality and that the Government should have brought Provoo to trial in Maryland, where he had been stationed in the Army, rather than in New York.

Provoo then was brought to Maryland where a grand jury indicted him on charges of treason last October. Five months later, Judge Thomsen ordered him freed.

Provoo had been at liberty under $5000 bond pending final action of the Government's appeal.

Provoo had been accused also of broadcasting wartime propaganda for the Japanese and of abusing fellow American soldiers in prison camps.

The Government was reported to have spent $1,000,000 to convict Provoo at his first trial, in 1953. Witnesses were called from all over the world: 20 of the Government's 34 witnesses were from Japan.

In the case of the 34-year-old Chessman, the court noted that he has charged that he was denied due process of law. The majority said that his petitions for review should not have been dismissed in the lower courts without a hearing on the questions. The court said it was "intimating any opinion" on the validity of Chessman's contentions.

Chessman gained a national reputation by writing two best-selling autobiographical books, "Cell 2455 Death Row" and "Trial by Ordeal," describing his fight for life. He was convicted in 1949 on 17 counts of kidnapping, robbery and sexual assault as the so-called "Red light bandit" of Los Angeles. He was the first person sentenced to death under California's "little Lindbergh law" prescribing the death penalty for kidnapping with bodily harm.

WOMAN'S SKULL CRUSHED; SOUGHT SON HIT BY TRUCK

PASADENA, Calif., Oct. 17 (AP)—The body of a well-to-do matron, her skull crushed, was found today in the bedroom of her home.

Police in San Bernardino, to the east, reported that her 18-year-old son, sought for questioning, dashed against the side of a truck. The youth, Jack Hawley, was struck by a diesel truck and was reported in serious condition.

The body of his mother, Mrs. Iris Hawley, was found later in her luxurious Pasadena home. There were signs of a struggle and a rambling note was found. Police did not divulge its contents.

Highway patrolmen reported young Hawley had run his father's automobile off the road near deVore, six miles north of San Bernardino. A mechanic reported that a bloody hammer was found under the front seat.

PRESIDENT HAS EYE ON FLOODS, CONSIDERS AID

Eisenhower Giving Personal Attention to Disaster Developments, Aid Says.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DENVER, Oct. 17—President Eisenhower was described as keeping in close touch with the flood disaster in New England and was considering possible relief measures.

Presidential press secretary
James C. Hagerty said yesterday Mr. Eisenhower would "continue to give the reports and developments from the flooded area his personal attention."

The summer White House here said it believed the declaration of emergency issued last August would still apply, but added that the status of the declaration was being checked in Washington.

The August declaration made the northeastern states, devastated by floods after torrential rains, eligible for federal relief funds. If the declaration still applies, the states would again be eligible for federal aid in the present emergency.

The President received new reports today on efforts by government agencies to help the flood-devastated area. He got the reports from Hagerty.

No Red Cross Appeal.
Mr. Eisenhower received from E. Roland Harriman, chairman of the American Red Cross, a message informing him the Red Cross had decided not to make a disaster fund appeal at this time, but would finance disaster relief for victims of weekend floods from Red Cross money on hand. Harriman pointed out, however, that Red Cross chapters across the country would be happy to accept voluntary contributions.

From the White House in Washington there was a long report on the extent of federal activities in the flooded areas.
In the report the Army Corps of Engineers said that 50 percent of the restoration work done following the August floods had been destroyed this weekend.

The Civil Defense Administration reported that its regional and national offices had been on an emergency basis around the clock since Friday, dispatching relief teams and task forces into the flood states.

The Bureau of Public Roads also reported it had sent experts into the affected states.

Hagerty said Mr. Eisenhower was briefed yesterday on the flood situation by Sherman Adams, chief presidential assistant. Adams spent about five minutes with Mr. Eisenhower in the latter's hospital room.

After the conference, Adams wired Gov. Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut, saying it was thought the August proclamation still applied but that other action would be taken under Public Law 875 if necessary.
Hagerty said the August declaration covered eight states—
Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut and North and South Carolina.

Asked Second Declaration.
Ribicoff, whose state was hardest hit by the new rains, had wired Mr. Eisenhower asking for a second declaration of emergency for Connecticut. The Governor said 67 communities had been struck by the new floods, 39 of them for the second time and 28 for the first time.

Public Law 875 is the disaster relief law invoked by presidential declaration to make emergency funds available to stricken areas.

Meanwhile Civil Defense Administrator Val Peterson arrived in New York today from San Francisco and left for Harford, Conn., to survey the flood damage.

Peterson told reporters that "we're going to throw the whole Government at this flood." He added, "I'm going to see that everything is done that possibly can be done by the Federal Government. We want to see that red tape is cut and that every Government agency is canvassed to see what is needed. We're going to throw everything we can, under the law, into this disaster."

Hagerty told reporters that federal agencies, including the Army Corps of Engineers, and civil defense officials moved into the flood-devastated areas yesterday.

WORKHOUSE FUGITIVE SURRENDERS VOLUNTARILY

Roy Davis Jr., one of two inmates who escaped from the City Workhouse Thursday, surrendered voluntarily to Warden Harold E. Baynes at the Workhouse last night.

Davis, 19 years old, of the 700 block of Division avenue, was serving six months for malicious destruction of property, but faces a two-year sentence at the Algoa Intermediate Reformatory upon completion of the term.

He and Wilton Rucker, 19-year-old Negro inmate, saved a bar in a window of the boiler room and climbed through to freedom. Warden Baynes said Davis' father made arrangements for him to surrender.
Rucker is still at large.

Jet Transport Flies Across U.S. and Back in Eight Hours

SEATTLE, Oct. 17 (AP)— Boeing's 707 Stratoliner flew round-trip across the country yesterday in less time than it takes conventional air liners to cross the nation one way.

The 707 took three hours and 58 minutes to fly from Seattle to Washington, D.C., at an average speed of 592 miles per hour.

After a brief stopover in the capital, the first American commercial jet air transport flew back to Seattle in four hours and eight minutes at an average speed of 570 miles an hour.

This means that it took eight hours and six minutes of elapsed flying time at an average of 581 miles per hour for the round trip.

The Boeing test pilot, A. M.
"Tex" Johnston, Emporia, Kan., called it an "uneventful" flight in the four-jet job. He predicted it will be common in three years.

On the eastward trip, the route was roughly over Billings, Mont., Kansas City and north of St. Louis. The route home, 2340 miles, was described as being north of Pittsburgh,
Chicago, Billings and Lewiston, Idaho.

After his round trip, Johnston boarded a conventional transport at Seattle to fly to New York, where is going to school a month with the American Management Association.

Orders for the Boeing jet airliner have been placed by Pan American World Airways. The plane will carry from 80 to 130 passengers.

AIRBORNE DEVICES TESTED AS GAUGES OF RADIOACTIVITY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 (UP)—
The Government began tests at the Nevada atomic proving ground today of airborne instruments developed for gauging radioactivity in event of nuclear war.

The aerial radiological monitoring exercise, dubbed "Operation Arme," will continue through Oct. 21. Thirty-one persons, including five from the Atomic Energy Commission, 25 from state and federal civil defense groups, and one from the Defense Department will participate.

The exercise has no connection with experiments starting around Nov. 1 to determine the safety of atomic weapons in event of accidents during handling and storage. Nor will any new atomic explosions be involved.

Low-level radiation still persisting at the Yucca and French-cient, the AEC said, to test the new detection, monitoring, and reporting instruments and techniques.

But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was; and when he saw him, he had compassion on him,

And went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him.

And on the morrow when he departed, he took out two pence, and gave them to the host, and said unto him, Take care of him: and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee.

Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbor unto him that fell among the thieves?

... He that showed mercy on him.

Then said Jesus... Go, and do thou likewise.

SYMINGTON HAS LUNCHEON WITH RAYBURN HERE

Two Are Guests of August A. Busch — No Political Significance, They Say.

Senator Stuart Symington and Sam Rayburn of Texas, Speaker of the House of Representatives, had lunch yesterday at the Grant's Farm estate of August A. Busch, president of Anheuser-Busch, Inc., in Sappington.

Afterwards, Busch climbed to the driver's seat of his coach-and-four and took the prominent Democrats for a ride through his deer park. All concerned said the occasion had no political significance.

Rayburn, who left by train late yesterday for Texas, was in St. Louis after a swing through the Eighth Congressional District. Symington flew here from St. Joseph, where he addressed a meeting of Young Democrats Saturday night.

"I have visited with Mr. Rayburn in his home state, and naturally I wanted to see him when he came to St. Louis," the Missouri Senator explained.

Symington, whom it is reported the Missouri delegation to the Democratic national convention may support as a "dark horse" candidate for the presidential nomination, again denied that he has White House aspirations. He is not a candidate, he said.

Rayburn, who at age 73 is not a candidate but has considerable influence in deciding on the nominee, said before the luncheon that the policies of Republican Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Benson were "destroying farmers."

"A lot of people voted for a change," he said, referring to the 1952 presidential election, "and they are getting it with a vengeance."

Busch said he had known both Rayburn and Symington for years, and the luncheon was "purely social." The Senator will speak in Kansas City tomorrow and plans to return to St. Louis Wednesday to address the Men's Club of the First Presbyterian Church in Kirkwood.

EGYPTIAN TELLS OF RUSSIAN OFFER TO FINANCE DAM

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 (AP)—Egyptian Ambassador Ahmed Hussein said today the Soviet Union has offered to provide all the foreign financing Egypt needs for the high dam which Egypt wants to build on the Nile.

Hussein told newspaper men the offer has not yet been accepted, but Egypt still hopes to obtain the amount needed—between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000—through the World Bank and possibly a United States grant-in-aid.

Hussein spoke with reporters as he came out of a 40-minute interview with Secretary of State Dulles and Assistant Secretary George Allen. Both the ambassador and the assistant secretary recently returned from Cairo where Allen went on an urgent mission after it was announced Egypt had made a deal to obtain arms from Communist Czechoslovakia.

In connection with the project for a high dam at Assuan, on the Nile, the ambassador said the Soviet offer was made "more than two months ago" and that it involved easy repayment terms, spread out over as much as 30 years and so arranged that Egypt could pay off in cotton, rice and other products.

P.O. STATION TO BE NAMED FOR LATE CHARLES NAGEL

The name of the late Charles Nagel of St. Louis, Secretary of Labor and Commerce under President William Howard Taft, will be given to the city's new Northwest parcel post station and auxiliary garage, 3415 North Kingshighway, it was announced today.

Dedication of the Charles Nagel Post Office is scheduled for mid-November. Mr. Nagel, who died in 1940 at the age of 90, was the father of Charles Nagel, new director of the City Art Museum.

The Nagel family came to St. Louis from Texas in 1849 when Texas joined the Confederacy, because of the family's intense feelings on the subject of slavery. The late Charles Nagel's father was an immigrant German physician. From 1873 until his death in 1940, Charles Nagel was the senior member of the law firm of Nagel, Kirby & Shepley. He was a member of the Republican national committee from 1908 to 1912.

STEVENSON IN NEW YORK FOR 3 OR 4 DAYS' BUSINESS

NEW YORK, Oct. 17 (UP)—Adlai E. Stevenson arrived here today for "three or four days" today for "three or four days" which he said would be devoted to legal and personal business.

He will meet with Senator Herbert H. Lehman tomorrow morning. A spokesman for Lehman said there was "nothing unusual" in the meeting of two "very good friends" and that Lehman "is not going to make any statement or any declaration."

Lehman has frequently stated his support for Stevenson and it has been predicted that he might be a late holdout in the "very good friends" and that Lehman "is not going to make any statement or any declaration."

Police said today a man booked as Robert J. Pelikan, an employee of the Lincoln-Mercury plant, admitted that last Saturday night he criminally assaulted a 13-year-old girl he picked up on a corner in North St. Louis.

The assault occurred in a panel truck, officers said. Pelikan, 24 years old, who lives in Sappington, was identified by the girl. He also admitted that last July, when drinking heavily, he assaulted and robbed a 36-year-old woman. He is held for the circuit attorney.

HEAD OF B'NAI B'RITH TALKS ON ISRAEL

Tells of Conference With Dulles, Speaks of Averting Arms Race.

The best way to avert a Middle East arms race, greatest threat to world peace since Korea, is an offer of guaranteed security to Middle Eastern nations, Philip Klutznick, national president of B'nei B'rith, said here last night.

Klutznick, a Forest Park (Ill.) attorney, addressed 1000 persons at Hotel Jefferson at the centennial banquet of B'nei B'rith's Missouri Lodge No. 22, the national fraternal organization's oldest and largest lodge west of the Mississippi river.

After recounting the brief and troubled history of the modern state of Israel, he told of a lengthy conference he had two years ago with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and of his visit to Israel last April. Many Israeli leaders then, he said, "were feeling a sense of isolation. Some questioned the extent to which the Western powers were prepared to live up to the declaration of 1950. There was growing impatience with what appeared to be a tendency to curry favor with the Arab states at what some thought was the expense of Israel."

"In that atmosphere I expressed my profound belief that before the year ended my Government would demonstrate by some act its belief in the traditional friendship of America and Israel that could lift the clouds of despair."

"Only a scant few weeks ago, these predictions saw the first public vestiges of possibility when Secretary Dulles proposed certain steps which were calculated to lead to better relations between Israel and the Arabs. 'The Dulles proposals, which set forth the commitments that the United States was prepared to make toward the security of the Middle East nations, were marked by a spirit of sincerity and good will.'"

After calling reports of the Russo-Czech arms deal "a new and shocking development," Klutznick continued: "In the Secretary's speech of August, he proffered the possibility of a security pact to the nations of the Middle East if as a pre-condition they adjusted some of their differences, including their border problems...."

"Whatever merit this pre-condition to security pact may have had prior to the Russo-Czech agreement, it begins to appear that the most effective way to stay an arms race is to offer guarantees of security to Israel or any other Middle Eastern nation that will abstain from this race."

In another address, Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (Dem.), St. Louis, told of the history of B'nei B'rith since its founding in New York in 1843 and linked its ethical values with the molding of America's political and social institutions.

IRAN REJECTS SOVIET PROTEST ON BAGHDAD PACT

TEHRAN, Oct. 17 (AP)—Iran told Russia yesterday Soviet objections to Iran joining the three-power Baghdad defense pact were "incorrect and inadmissible."

Iran announced last Wednesday it was joining Turkey, Iraq and Pakistan in the military alliance. Russia immediately protested that this would endanger Soviet-Iranian relations.

At a press conference, Deputy Premier Abdul Hussein Hamzavi announced a memorandum from Premier Hussein Ala was handed Russian Ambassador Anatoli Lavrentiev yesterday morning, rejecting Soviet charges that the pact is the "instrument of certain aggressive circles."

Hamzavi said the memorandum reassured Russia of Iran's friendship, and added "adherence to the pact does not in any way mar the friendly relations and good neighborliness existing between Iran and Russia."

The pact, said the Iranian note, is an agreement "concluded with regard to the principles of the United Nations charter."

PATAKES' PAYS, SENDS $350 TO CONSCIENCE FUND

Two $175 money orders, signed by the apparently fictitious name, "George Patakes," were received today by Ernest M. Flinn, assistant director of the Internal Revenue Service here and custodian of the service's conscience fund.

"I am planning to move west," the sender wrote in a letter accompanying the money orders, "and I thought I would like to go with a light conscience."

The writer said the $350 was interest due on two previous payments made on back income taxes, one for $1600 and another for $400. Flinn said the largest amount ever received for the conscience fund was $1600 in 1952.

"Money means nothing to me," observed the writer, who added that he was nearing 70 years of age. He also said he planned to buy 1000 acres in the Ozarks for a camp for Missouri children "so they can learn to be sharpshooters like the immortal Davy Crockett."

ILLINOIS MAN ELECTROCUTED WHEN DERRICK HITS WIRE

Roy E. Brown, a plumber of Union, Ill., was electrocuted and another worker was seriously injured today when a derrick boom came in contact with a 7200-volt overhead high tension wire at a construction site north of St. Charles on state route 94, St. Charles police reported.

The injured man, Thomas J. McVey, 1024 Oakview place, was taken to St. Joseph Hospital, St. Charles, suffering from burns of the hands and feet and shock. He and Brown, 31 years old, were guiding a 12-foot length of cast iron pipe, which the derrick was lowering into a ditch, when the accident occurred, police said.

Robert Benke, the derrick operator, of Crestwood, St. Louis county, was uninjured. The workers, employed by Midwest Ditching Co., were laying pipe for the St. Charles Municipal Water Department to a new plant being built for Sterling Aluminum Co.

MAN IS SHOT IN ABDOMEN BY BOY IN DISPUTE ON FARM

David Koenig, 24-year-old truck driver of Washington, Mo., was in serious condition today at St. Francis Hospital there suffering a gunshot wound in the abdomen he received Friday on the farm of Otto Ballman, where he lived.

Chief of Police A. E. Smith of Washington reported a 15-year-old boy, who worked on Ballman's farm, admitted doing the shooting. Smith said Ballman told him he had argued with Koenig about the use of a tractor. The boy said he threw rocks at Koenig and Koenig threw a rock back at him. This caused him to lose his temper, get a gun from the farmhouse and shoot Koenig, police reported.

The boy is being held in Franklin county jail at Union, Mo., suspected of felonious assault.

THIEVES STEAL PARKED STORE TRUCK AND GOODS

An undetermined amount of merchandise was stolen today from a Famous-Barr Co. truck which was driven away from Vandeventer and Kennerly avenues by unidentified persons while the driver and his helper were making deliveries.

Police, summoned by the driver, Eugene Dillon, trailed the truck to an alley back of 3019 Fair avenue, several blocks from where it was taken. A check was being made to determine what had been stolen.

NOT A CANDIDATE, GOV. KNIGHT SAYS

Californian Asserts He Will Support Any Presidential Nominee Convention Picks.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17 (AP)—Gov. Goodwin J. Knight of California says "I'm not a candidate for President" even if President Eisenhower does not run for re-election.

The Governor made the statement to reporters last night as he arrived by plane for a number of speeches at Republican meetings.

Knight, who has been mentioned as a potential candidate for President, said Vice President Richard M. Nixon "is all right with me if he's nominated. It depends on what the President's wishes are."

Nixon and Senate Republican leader William F. Knowland are other Californians who have been mentioned along with Knight as possible presidential aspirants.

A reporter asked Knight about reports that he opposes Nixon for the presidential nomination. Knight suggested that such reports might have developed from the fact that California's Governor traditionally heads the state's delegation to the national convention.

MAN ADMITS STEALING SAFE AND $900, HAS $450 ON HIM

A man who has admitted stealing a safe containing $900 from the home of James M. Burke, 3721A Louisiana avenue, was arrested today by police in the 3500 block of Halliday avenue. About $450 of the stolen money was in his possession, police said.

The 200-pound safe, which was stolen Saturday night, was found today on a continuation of Spring avenue, which is under construction between Delor street and Itasca avenue. The safe had been opened. Some bonds it had contained had not been removed.

Police said the thief apparently gained entry to the Burke home by breaking a pane of glass in an outside door and then reaching inside to open the door.

LEMAY GIRL ASSAULTED, 2 TEEN-AGERS SOUGHT

Two teen-age boys were being sought by St. Louis county police today as the attackers of a 13-year-old Lemay girl who reported that she was criminally assaulted early yesterday after attending a dance.

She said she met them at the dance, learning only their first names, and accepted their offer to take her home. Instead, she said, they drove to a secluded place on New Baumgartner road and assaulted her after threatening to kill her. She left them, sought help at a nearby home, and was driven to her home.

LIQUOR CLERK CHARGED WITH SALE TO MINOR

David Van Harken, clerk at a package liquor store and tavern at 9969 Halls Ferry road, Moline, was charged with illegal sale of whisky to a minor today as the result of a Saturday night visit to his store by two officers posing as customers.

St. Louis County Detective James L. Graves and State Liquor Control Agent Raymond McHughes, investigating a complaint, entered the store just before another prospective customer who looked to be under 21 years of age, they reported.

"What can I do for you?" the clerk asked the officers, they related. "We haven't decided," Graves and McHughes replied, studying the labels, "wait on him." Then the officers watched.

They said the youth bought two fifths of whisky, whereupon they asked his age and were told he was 19. Graves and McHughes confiscated the whisky and sent it to Jefferson City for analysis.

SOUTHWESTERN BELL, UNION RESUME PAY NEGOTIATIONS

Representatives of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. and the CIO Communications Workers met again today at the company offices for further negotiations on a new contract covering the workers.

The last previous session was on Saturday. Frank P. Loneragan, assistant director of Communications Workers, District 6, said there appeared to be no progress at that meeting.

The 51,000 company employees who are members of the union previously voted by a 7 to 1 margin to authorize a strike if such action is necessary to enforce wage demands.

No deadline has been set for the strike, and last week Loneragan announced a change in company attitude in the negotiating sessions indicated the danger of a work stoppage was abating.

TRADE INCREASES AMONG INDIA, RUSSIA, RED CHINA

NEW DELHI, Oct. 17 (AP)—The development of relations between India and Russia and Communist China is reflected in trade among the three countries.

In 1955's first six months India got the equivalent of $2,393,000 in goods from Russia and $2,100,000 from China. Both figures exceed imports for the whole year 1954. Exports to Russia in six months were worth $2,688,000, about at the 1954 half-year ratio, but exports to China reached $4,809,000 against $3,717,000 for all 1954. From Russia India is getting newsprint, dyeing and tanning materials, and limited amounts of machinery and steel. From China come raw silks, drugs, of iron and steel. Russia gets black pepper, hides, skins and lac, an ingredient of lacquer. China is getting Indian cotton.

WOMAN FAINTS WHEN BURGLAR SEIZES HER

Man Flees Without Loot After Twisting Arm of Victim in Home.

Mrs. Mildred T. Jaspur, principal of Sherwood Day School in Town and Country, was found unconscious early yesterday by her son, Henri, after an intruder entered their home at 6042 Westminster place.

Alone at the residence, Mrs. Jaspur, 45 years old, was in a front room when she saw the burglar. She described him to officers as a middle-aged Negro who wore a mustache and was of light complexion.

Mrs. Jaspur said she reached for the telephone to call police, whereupon the man, without saying a word, seized her by an arm and twisted it. She fainted and was found by the telephone when her son returned with a friend, Stephen Ducina. She refused medical attention. The intruder left by the front door, having gained entrance by a kitchen window. No property was missing, police reported. Sherwood School is at 12292 Clayton road.

Theft of $1000 from the apartment of Mrs. Charles McCune at 4386 West Pine boulevard was discovered by Mrs. McCune when she returned home shortly before 10 p.m. yesterday, police reported.

The money was stolen from a metal box hidden in a dresser, Mrs. McCune, a widow, said. A rear door to the apartment had been forced in the three-hour period she was away.

The TRUMAN MEMOIRS

Potsdam Conference Relegates Polish Question to Foreign Ministers—Stalin Balks at Discussing Yugoslavia Without Tito.

By HARRY S. TRUMAN
Thirty-third President of the United States.
TWENTIETH ARTICLE

© 1955 by Time, Inc.
(Publisher of "LIFE")

CHURCHILL opened the second meeting of the Potsdam conference by raising a question of the relation of the press to the conference. He complained there were many representatives of the press outside the well-guarded fortress in which the conference was taking place and they were raising a great cry in the world press regarding the inadequacy of their access to information.

"Who let them in?" Stalin shouted in a loud voice. Churchill told the Premier that the press was being kept outside the compound. If his colleagues agreed, Churchill said, he was willing to have a talk with the press, not to explain the work of the meeting, but rather why the press must be excluded.

I saw no need for this. I pointed out that each delegation had a press representative here and suggested that it be left to them to handle.

Churchill agreed, saying, "I only offered myself as the lamb and, in any event, I would only go if the Generalissimo agreed to rescue me."

I think Churchill enjoyed the reaction of his colleagues to the dramatic suggestion of his acting as spokesman in a situation such as this one.

Door to Council Left Open for China.

At this second meeting I placed on the agenda three topics submitted to the conference by the foreign ministers. The first dealt with a re-draft of the American proposal for setting up a Council of Foreign Ministers. It provided that the Council could be made up of those countries which had already signed terms of surrender with the enemy. This left the door open for China to participate in the Council later at the close of the war with Japan. Therefore, this proposal was acceptable to us. The make-up of the Council of Foreign Ministers and the procedure for peace settlements were agreed to unanimously.

In the discussion on the submission of all treaties to the United Nations, Stalin observed that this made no difference, as "the three powers would represent the interests of all."

That was Stalin's viewpoint all the way. His viewpoint was that Russia, Britain and the United States would settle world affairs, and that it was nobody else's business. I felt very strongly that participation of all nations, small and large, was just as important to world peace as that of the Big Three. It was my policy and purpose to make the United Nations a going and vital organization.

I then asked Secretary Byrnes to read the foreign ministers' report on the American proposal on policy toward Germany. Byrnes said the political and economic experts had not yet completed their work. The foreign ministers recommended, however, that the heads of government hold an exploratory discussion on the political questions dealing with the occupation of Germany.

We turned to a discussion of the Polish question. Stalin introduced a Russian draft proposal on Poland. He suggested that the question be referred to the foreign secretaries and Churchill and I agreed.

That was all of the agenda for the second meeting, and the session adjourned at six o'clock, after meeting only an hour and forty-five minutes. I felt that some progress had been made, but I was beginning to grow impatient for more action and fewer words.

Late that night I talked with Mrs. Truman in Independence via trans-Atlantic radio-telephone. It was the first call from Berlin to America since 1942. The connection was just as clear as if it had been between Independence and Washington.

Stalin Balks at Discussing Yugoslavia.

At the third session on July 19, we turned our attention to Yugoslavia. Stalin said we could not discuss this question because the Yugoslavs were not present to be heard and they were Allies.

Eden spoke up to say that the Big Three had agreed upon a declaration at Yalta, although no Yugoslavs were present.

Stalin replied that, when they met at Yalta, there had been two Yugoslav governments, but now there was one legitimate government.

Churchill inquired if Stalin meant the government of Tito or that of Subasic. He said that the Yugoslavs were in extreme disagreement.

Stalin replied that this was the first time he had heard about it. He proposed that this information be verified and that Yugoslav representative be summoned to tell them about the situation.

I asked whether, on the basis of the Prime Minister's information, we should send for the Yugoslav representatives. Churchill answered that he was disappointed at the way things had turned out in Yugoslavia since the Yalta decisions.

Stalin charged that Churchill was going on with the discussion without answering the presiding officer's question. Then followed an exchange between Churchill and Stalin concerning the calling of the Yugoslav representatives.

I felt that I had heard enough of this. I told Churchill and Stalin that I had come to the conference as a representative of the United States to discuss world affairs. I did not come there to hold a police court hearing on something that was already settled or which would eventually be settled by the United Nations. If we started that, I said, we would become involved in trying to settle every political difficulty and would have to hold hearings for a succession of representatives including De Gaulle, Franco, and others. I told them frankly that I did not wish to waste time listening to grievances, but wanted to deal with the problems which the three heads of government had come to settle. I said that if they did not get to the main issues, I was going to pack up and go home. I meant just that.

Stalin laughed heartily and said he did not blame the President for wanting to go home; he wanted to go home, too.

I observed that we, too, had received complaints about Yugoslavia and suggested that the matter be postponed so that we could go ahead with other and more urgent problems before us.

Seizure of Oil Equipment in Romania.

Our final topic on the agenda for the day had to do with British and American oil equipment in Romania.

Churchill said that the British had submitted a paper on this subject which they thought the foreign ministers could agree upon, and suggested that since it was a rather detailed question, it be referred to them first.

Stalin said he thought this was a trifling matter which could be settled through diplomatic channels without raising it at this conference.

The reason Stalin insisted that this was a "trifling matter" was that he had obtained possession of equipment that belonged to the United States and Great Britain. It was funny to watch him. Every time there was something like this, where the Russians had stolen the coffin and disposed of the body, he was always very careful to insist that it be settled through diplomatic channels.

Churchill said that the disposition of British and American oil equipment was not a trifling matter. It was true, he agreed, that the Germans had stolen pipe from the British, but it was pipe which the British had bought and paid for.

I observed that the United States was involved in a similar situation with regard to American oil companies.

Stalin had nothing more to say on this subject. It was agreed that the matter would be referred to the foreign ministers, and this concluded the third meeting.

On the evening following the third afternoon session, I entertained at a state dinner held in the Little White House.

Music was by a special concert orchestra. The pianist, Sgt. Eugene List, played Chopin's great Waltz in A-flat major, opus 42, and several Chopin nocturnes. Stalin was a Chopin fan. Churchill did not care much for that kind of music.

Since I had been told previously that Stalin was fond of Chopin, I had asked Sergeant List to brush up on his Chopin. He sent for the score of the Waltz in A-flat major and practiced it for a week before the dinner. The piano was not a good concert instrument, but List did a good job anyway. I took a

ALSOP Treasury Chief Says Warren Is His Choice

Humphrey Prefers Chief Justice to Nixon as G.O.P. Nominee.

By JOSEPH AND STEWART ALSOP
CHICAGO.

THE gradual unveiling of the intentions of key individuals is always the most exciting process in any confused political situation, such as the situation which has been created by the President's heart attack.

Last Monday, a major unveiling occurred in Chicago. The occasion was the fundraising dinner of the Republican Citizens' Finance Committee, at which Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey was the chief speaker. After the dinner the Citizens' Committee chairman, Charles Percy of the Bell & Howell Co., gave a party at which Humphrey met a select group of the larger Republican contributors.

It was here that the unveiling of Humphrey took place. Inevitably, the other guests wanted to know which candidate Humphrey would favor if President Eisenhower should decide not to run again. Humphrey answered that he thought Chief Justice Earl Warren would be the strongest and best choice the Republican party could make, although, Humphrey added, "Warren will be very hard to get."

High Significance. Despite its private and informal character, this Humphrey declaration for Warren has the highest significance. In his own state of Ohio, Humphrey comes close to being the behind-the-scenes boss of the Republican organization. All over the country, the businessmen who form the dominant Republican group look to Humphrey for leadership and will follow where he leads.

In the White House, above all, Humphrey has more influence with the President than any other man except Sherman Adams. Humphrey also has great influence with Adams, with whom he long ago formed a quiet personal alliance.

For the immediate future, the White House is where Humphrey's choice is likely to

GALLUP POLL

Warren Holds 5-to-3 Edge Over Harriman in 'Trial Heat'

Chief Justice Draws Large Portion of His Support From Independent Voters.

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

(Copyright, 1955, PRINCETON, N.J., Oct. 17.

CHIEF JUSTICE EARL WARREN ran ahead of New York's Gov. Averell Harriman by a substantial 5-to-3 margin in the latest "trial heat" as possible presidential candidates for 1956. In a presidential test poll conducted by the Institute following the illness of President Eisenhower, the California Republican, three times elected Governor of that state by large majorities, held a lead over Harriman of 59 per cent to 37 per cent.

A cross-section of voters was asked how it would vote if Warren and Harriman were the opposing candidates in a presidential election at this time. Here is the result:

WARREN vs. HARRIMAN
Warren ———— 59%
Harriman ———— 37%
Undecided ———— 4%

Eliminating the 4 per cent who said they would be undecided, the vote divides 62 per cent for Warren, 38 per cent for Harriman.

The Harriman boom has been gaining momentum in the last several days and many observers believe that he will give Adlai Stevenson a good race for the Democratic nomination. He is currently among the top contenders as shown in Institute polls.

In a survey last April, Warren led the list of Republican candidates for the nomination if President Eisenhower declined to run. Following that poll, Warren issued a statement of his intentions to withdraw from politics permanently for services on the Supreme Court.

Warren ran second to Vice President Nixon, in a recent survey as the top choice of G.O.P. voters for their party's 1956 nomination of Mr. Eisenhower doesn't run.

With the changed political aspect, many observers consider Warren a good prospect for the Republican nomination, and believe he would reconsider his withdrawal if President Eisenhower requested him to run and Warren were convinced that the party wanted him.

Others think that Warren will not run under any circumstances.

Obviously, the course of events between now and 1956 will have an important bearing on the popularity of both Warren and Harriman and their "availability" for the nominations.

Seoul Envoy's Recall Hurts U.S. Prestige

Korea Said to Fear Lacy Was Trying to Get Rid of Rhee.

By MURRY FROMSON
SEOUL, Oct. 17 (AP).

AMERICAN prestige in the Far East has not been enhanced by the resignation of United States Ambassador William Lacy.

Despite the State Department's explanation that Lacy had asked to be recalled because of illness, there is mounting evidence that quiet Korean pressure is responsible.

His resignation, predicted in Washington last week, shocked United States Embassy sources here and in Tokyo.

Korean pressure against him stems from a fear that Lacy was assigned to Seoul to watch next year's crucial election when President Syngman Rhee will seek a third term.

This is fear based on reports that he figured in the 1953 Philippine election when President Ramon Magsaysay came to power. Lacy was counselor of embassy in Manila.

"Is it true that you've come to Korea to get rid of Syngman Rhee?" one Korean politician asked bluntly.

Lacy denied this and other Korean suspicions that he might try to influence the 1956 balloting here.

There is no indication that United States policy seeks any leader in Korea besides Rhee. Nevertheless he is 80 years old and had a glandular operation last spring. The possibility exists that Lacy was sent to Korea partly to look for new leadership in the event of Rhee's death.

When Lacy arrived here he got what amounted to an official snub. Neither Rhee nor Foreign Minister Y. T. Pyun met him at the airport, and he waited four days before Rhee summoned him to present his credentials.

It is known that Rhee had objected to his appointment on grounds of youth and inexperience. Lacy is 45, and was chief of the Southeast Asia Affairs Bureau in the State Department, but this was his first ambassadorial post.

Lacy is said to have told

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Education or Commerce

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

During the past few months, there has been considerable comment made in editorials and letters concerning educational television in general and Channel 9 in particular.

For the most part these letters and editorials have been critical, some constructively critical and some not so constructive. However, I feel that these letters have failed to consider some pertinent aspects of the situation.

First, we should realize that educational television is a unique use of the medium. Few if any precedents have been set up on which the beginning of educational television can base their movements. It has been largely a process of learning by trial and error.

But this leads to a second consideration. Which is better—to have educational television which must struggle through the uncertainties of a troubled early existence or to see Channel 9 given to a commercial station to bring us more bad comedians, horse and soap operas, and give away?

This seems to me to be the vital issue. Shall we bear with Channel 9 through its infancy, or shall we write it off as a bad guess by idealists and turn to Milton Berle?

St. Louis is one of the few cities in the United States to have non-commercial educational television. Please, let's not throw it away before it has had a chance to prove itself.

ALLAN KENT.

Sewer Beneficiaries

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Some readers of the Post-Dispatch seem to be of the opinion that the Metropolitan St. Louis Sewer District was created and voted into existence by county residents alone.

I would like to ask those readers where they were on election day when the MSD was voted into existence? A majority of city voters voted for it. A majority of county voters voted against it. There would be no MSD.

I wonder how many voters read the Charter before they voted for it? I believe many voted for the Charter, thinking they would receive needed sewer benefits at the expense of some one else. To date it seems the only ones benefiting from the MSD are those on the payroll, and they are benefiting at everyone's expense.

COUNTY COUSIN.

Picking on the Little Guy

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I have just read about the new "Anti-Noise" bill passed by the County Council. What a stupid piece of legislation!

This really shows how the weak council bends to the pressures of certain groups. Won't be forgotten, either.

I give the fellow a devil of a lot of credit who has enough guts and ambition to build himself a home or add to his present one. Not every one can afford to pay the terrific prices for a home the size he needs. So he builds one. During the week he must earn his living, leaving only Saturday and Sunday to build. Now the council wants to deprive him of this opportunity to do it himself.

It seems to me these Councilmen could do some real constructive service to the county by acting on the vital issues that need attention such as sewers and expressways instead of picking on the little guy.

The best thing the Council could do now is rescind this stinker.

J. SCHWARZ.

A Test of Good Faith

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Your editorial "For a World-Wide U.N." focuses attention on one of the crucial problems facing the U.N. in its tenth anniversary.

Clearly designed to be a world-wide organization, the U.N. should be based on the principle of universality, rather than selectivity.

Yet, the Soviet Union has used its veto power 28 times to bar candidate states which had received the endorsement of a majority of seven in the Security Council.

On the other hand, as early as 1947 the United States expressed willingness to eliminate the veto on admission to membership, and the United States Senate endorsed this position in the Vandenberg Resolution of June 11, 1948, by a vote of 64 to 4.

If the "spirit of Geneva" is to become a living and constructive reality, a test of Soviet good faith could well be its acceptance of the same principle.

Saying "Democratic Party," With omission of "Party."

Now Democrats shorten by syllables too.

A Dark Threat in Georgia

A senatorial race which is threatening in Georgia will be watched with interest and concern from all over the country. The possibility there is that Senator Walter F. George will run for re-election and be opposed by former Gov. Herman Talmadge.

Neither man has announced his candidacy, but both men are making speeches of the distinctly campaigning type all over the state. Senator George was stung into doing so by a newspaper editorial suggesting that he decline to run for re-election because he would inevitably be defeated by Mr. Talmadge. The New York Times' Southern correspondent, John N. Popham, reporting on the undeclared contest, says that "as a matter of sheer organizational strength Mr. Talmadge holds the trump cards."

It would be a national shame if what Senator George stands for should be replaced in the United States Senate by what former Gov. Talmadge stands for.

Georgia's delegation, with Richard B. Russell as junior Senator, is a truly distinguished one. Senator George is the powerful post of chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has been the strong bipartisan right arm of President Eisenhower in the conduct of foreign relations aimed at easing East-West tensions. He has been to Mr. Eisenhower what the late Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan was to President Truman—and perhaps even more. His history-making advocacy of the conference at the summit in Geneva last summer is but the latest of his constructive services to a united American front for peace.

Herman Talmadge, to the contrary, is the complete demagogue and blatherskite, who appeals to ignorance and prejudice wherever he thinks he can find it.

He has been a race-baiter all his political life and one of the loudest and most incendiary in resistance to the United States Supreme Court's order for integration of the races in the public schools.

In his present speeches he is vehemently championing the Bricker amendment to limit the President's treaty-making powers, challenging the foreign policies on which President Eisenhower and Senator George have collaborated, and opposing foreign aid and what he calls "entangling alliances."

Senator George has promised to announce his decision about seeking re-election when he returns to Washington in late December in preparation for the reconvening of Congress in January.

More than the organizational strength of Talmadge in Georgia is against Senator George. His age is against him—he is 77; and many Georgians feel, according to Mr. Popham, that if he is re-elected Mr. Talmadge is likely to succeed him in a few years by appointment of a friendly Governor and would then make reprisals against those who had not supported him. And finally, Senator George has not had direct contact with the Georgia voters in a number of years.

From Missouri, it can only be hoped that should the test come which appears to be shaping up, enough Georgia voters will distinguish between a demagogue and a statesman to resolve the issue for the good of their state and of the nation.

Expressway Into Downtown

Why would anyone have raised obstacle after obstacle to block the building of the two-mile Third Street Interregional Highway?

That old question comes to mind again now that traffic moves smoothly along the new six-lane expressway from its connection with Washington avenue and Eads Bridge on the north to the intersection of Twelfth street and Gravois avenue on the south.

Yet just such obstacles were thrown up to delay the building of the long-needed highway. Costs went up as time wasted and finally this major improvement cost $13,037,292. Since it took four years to construct there is notice in that fact alone that St. Louis must push its expressway program with all possible speed.

Meantime a welcome and a salute to the Third Street Interregional as the first expressway to reach into the downtown business district. It strikes off the first of the bonds of traffic congestion that have been strangling the central business district.

Old Masters in the Space World

A lot of people have read "Treasure Island," "David Copperfield" and "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn." But only a very few have been fortunate enough to read anything from "Treasure Moon," "Spaceman Copperfield" and "The Adventures of Spaceberry Finn." What they read was so well written in the vein of Robert Louis Stevenson, Charles Dickens and Mark Twain that it had all the earmarks of having emanated from the pens of these old masters.

When The Christian Science Monitor began publishing these "excerpts from the Space Classics" last year it took pains to make clear that the real authors were Monitor contributors and not Stevenson, Dickens and Twain. And a credit line at the end of each "excerpt" has always given a year in the future as date of publication.

There followed such delightful bits of fantasy as "Little Space Women," "Alice's Adventures Overhead," "Don Quixote—Space Knight," and "Rip Van Space-Winkle." With the total of these imaginative writings standing at 30, the Monitor has been impetuously by librarians, booksellers, educators, parents and readers generally wanting to know where they can obtain the complete volumes of the Space Classics. So the Monitor has re-emphasized that the "complete volumes" are only available—if ever—on the shelves of the future.

With the world on the threshold of the Space Age it is entirely fitting that those familiar only with the literary gems of recent generations should be introduced to a kind of classical space literature. Contrariwise, it is equally fitting that those who have been steeped in space literature should be introduced—or reintroduced—to the writings of the old masters of America and Europe. May the excerpts from the Space Classics continue to arouse curiosity!

The Field Marshal's Advice

Field Marshal Montgomery's remarks in Britain on the organization of military forces are likely to strike many a layman in this country as worth serious thought. Among other things Montgomery suggested the elimination of sea, land and air forces as separate entities and combining them into a single service.

While this may be regarded as heresy by some military careerists, individual Americans may feel compelled to agree with much of what Montgomery says. He sees the present separate existence of the three services in the great nations of the world as a waste of money and manpower. Certainly the United States seems to be top-heavy with administrative overhead. Not only are we burdened with supporting separate headquarters establishments for each of the services; we also are carrying the Defense Department on top of everything else. Military spending takes about 67 cents out of every dollar budgeted by the Federal Government. Waste in this area is a luxury we ought not to put up with. And if substantial savings can be made by reorganizing the services, every effort ought to be made to realize them.

Some Unfinished Business

T. Coleman Andrews says he feels he has completed his work in Washington, and hence will quit as Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Certainly the tax service was in question when he took office in 1953, and many improvements have been made. But not every question has been answered as he prepares to leave office.

Mr. Andrews has had a difficult job running the Government's largest business. Tax enforcement is not calculated to make everybody happy, and the tax scandals of 1951-52 had left Americans thoroughly unhappy with the IRS when Mr. Andrews became its chief.

A Virginia Democrat who had supported President Eisenhower, Mr. Andrews fell heir not only to a clean-up job but to a peculiar political situation. The Republicans had campaigned for making government clean as a hound's tooth. But the basis for tax reforms had been laid in the last year of the previous Democratic Administration, and it soon appeared that one of Mr. Andrews' chief critics would be a Republican, Senator Williams of Delaware.

The Senator, who had prompted the tax investigation during the Truman Administration, has recently criticized the IRS for failing to press tax delinquency cases. And the IRS attempted to fire a woman employee who had given the Senator information on tax matters. That case had the unfortunate effect of making it appear that Senator Williams was not getting as much co-operation from the Republican Administration as he had received from the Democrats. And the political question rose emphatically when after long delay the IRS closed an income tax case involving Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin, who refused to discuss the details.

The reorganization plan which Mr. Andrews carried out has also come into question. In August a committee of tax experts told the Joint Senate-House Internal Revenue Committee that morale in the Revenue Service was poor. The experts called attention to a new production quota system, which they said required tax agents to inspect a certain number of tax returns without regard to proper standards of inspection. The committee called for reforms in the reforms.

A big business should always admit to room for improvement. As Mr. Andrews prepares to move back to Richmond, he leaves some important unfinished work in the Internal Revenue Service.

Prosecute Both Suits

Just as it is desirable that the State of Missouri go on with its suit to recover $30,000 in penalties from the AFL bus and streetcar operators union so is it desirable for the union to continue with its test case against the King-Thompson law.

The suit brought by the union against Gov. Donnelly and Daniel C. Rogers, chairman of the State Board of Mediation, challenges the validity of the statute, the seizure by the state, and the penalties imposed.

The merits or demerits of both cases aside, the best interests of the people of Missouri require a thorough review of the King-Thompson law in the courts, with final judgment, if necessary, in the Supreme Court in Washington. This law has been on the statute books for seven years. It has been used in utility strikes from time to time in that period. The question of its constitutionality ought to be settled.

By pressing the two suits now filed—one against the union, the other against the state—the disputants will hold out the prospect of a much needed determination as to legality.

Mr. Humphrey and Tax Cuts

Secretary Humphrey is a little more cautious now than he was a few weeks ago about holding out promises of a tax cut next year. But on his trip to Denver he restated his hopes for a balanced budget by the end of the current fiscal year next June, and noted that if this happens it might justify some tax reduction.

As to what happens to the once-sacred cause of reducing the national debt, if taxes are cut the minute a budget balance is achieved, Mr. Humphrey propounds the interesting theory that this is not the time for debt reduction. That can come later, he says, when military expenditures are reduced from their present high level.

There is another consideration, and a weighty one, to which Secretary Humphrey makes no reference at all. If by next June the national economy continues to boom at its present rate, a tax cut might be precisely the wrong Treasury policy to adopt. As the chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers said just the other day, a boom which rocks along on the edge of inflation must be constantly watched and safeguarded to prevent runaway inflation. A tax cut at the wrong time in the cycle could fuel such an inflation, whereas it is the duty of Government to check it.

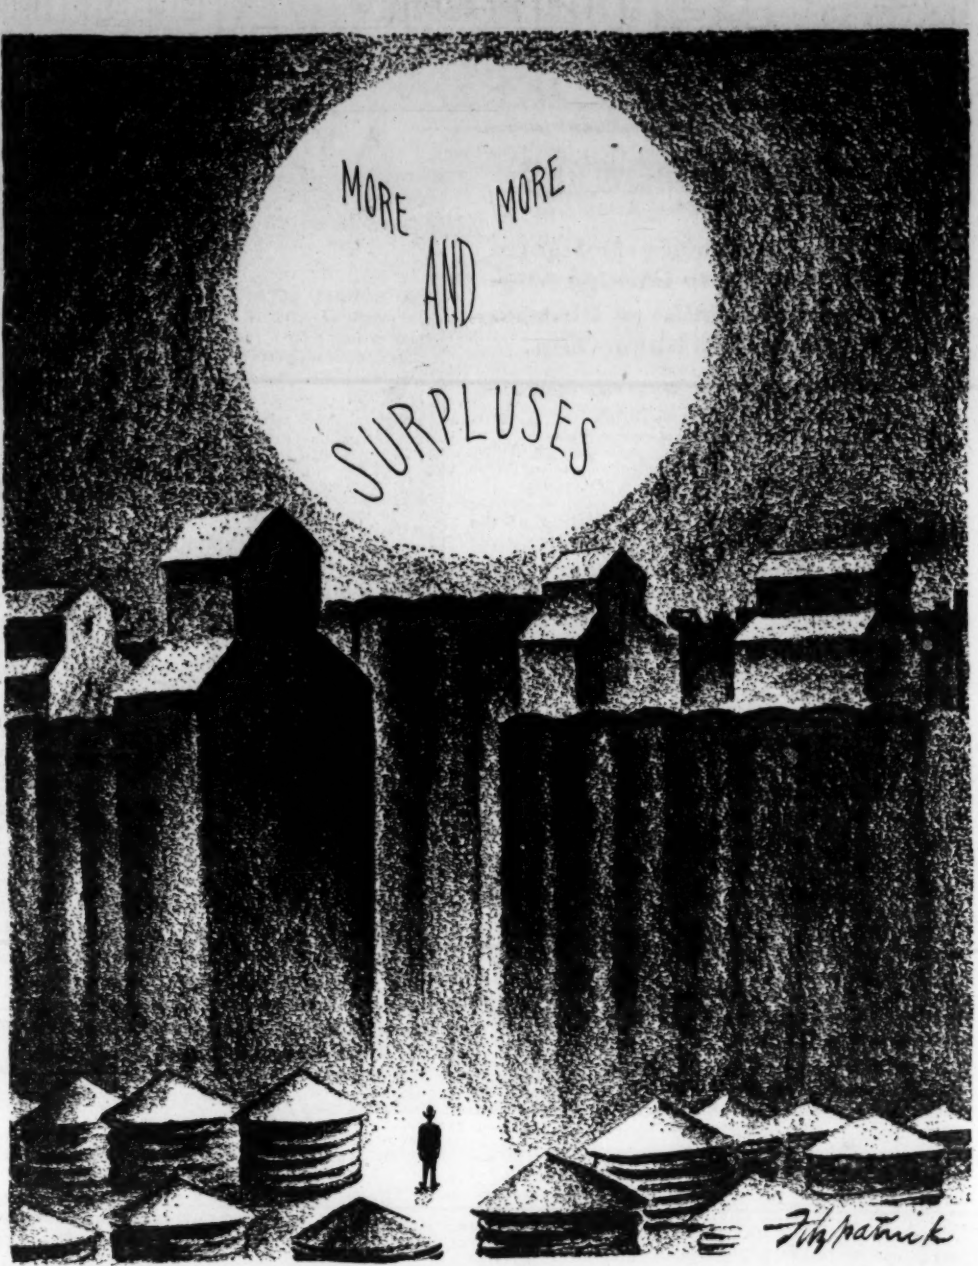

These are, of course, economic considerations only and they leave entirely out of account the political consideration of being able to present the voters with a tax cut in an election year. Unfortunately the political considerations often are stronger than any others, and so they may prove next year. But those considerations ought not to dominate the recommendations of the Secretary of the Treasury in the Eisenhower Administration.

Aerial Flatfoot? Ho-hum

A design for a flying aircraft carrier able to launch a score or more jet fighters has been put forward by Grover Loening, a well-known aeronautical engineer. Six times the size of the giant B-52 intercontinental bomber, it would weigh 1100 tons. Twenty jet engines plus some highlift wing devices would enable it to take off from the water. Speed would be 500 miles an hour.

Such a craft would greatly extend the range of jet fighters which burn much of their fuel reaching combat altitude. It could be argued that it would be less vulnerable to attack than a Navy flatfoot and less exposed to attack than the immobile land bases with locations known to any enemy. Mr. Loening estimates the cost of his carrier at $110,000,000 whereas the Navy's Forrestal is expected to cost nearly twice that.

In view of the progress that aviation has made since the Wright brothers first flew their tiny craft back in 1903, and the Administration's announcement that it plans to launch mass satellites that would circle the earth at an altitude of 200 miles and a speed of 18,000 miles an hour, Mr. Loening's plan for an aerial flatfoot should cause no eyebrow-lifting at all.

HARVEST MOON

They Lobby in the U.N., Too

The Mirror of Public Opinion

North lounge is scene as delegates buttonhole each other to trade votes; merits of issue not always controlling, as when France lost Algerian vote due to Greek revenge; each delegation has 'arm twisters' who have developed three grades of tactics.

Sydney Gruson in The New York Times

The north lounge of the United Nations conference building is a large, well-appointed room with bar, snack room and other comforts to help delegates relax. But it is also the center of another, little publicized phase of activities here—lobbying.

The United Nations is not a congress or parliament, and the lobbying here is not the same as the Washington variety. With rare exceptions, there are no outsiders seeking to win friends and influence people. United Nations delegates lobby with other delegates.

Some United Nations issues are decided on their merits. Many others are not. They are decided by the trading of votes. Country A votes for Country B with the unspoken understanding that B will reciprocate on an issue vitally affecting A.

Take France's 28-to-27 defeat in her efforts to keep the Algerian question off the General Assembly's agenda. According to delegates who should know, Greece's vote against France had nothing to do with Greece felt on the specific issue.

France had voted earlier against the Greeks to keep the Cyprus item off the agenda. One pro-French delegate bitterly labeled the Algerian vote "Greece's revenge."

This is only one example of a process going on all the time. Everyone regrets it, but no one knows what, if anything, should be done about it.

Virtually every country has a group of persons listed as advisers on its delegation; the bigger the delegation, the more advisers. Many jokingly refer to themselves as "arm twisters." There is nothing haphazard about one of their operations to corral votes.

Men are assigned to targets—a bloc of Latins, the Arabs or, perhaps, a handful of European waverers. Weak spots in the opposition are sought out and concentrated on.

There are three recognizable tactics on view in the lounge almost any day.

The first has the adviser stand around with a look that is supposed to invite questions about how his delegation feels on an issue. This is used when the issue is either not too important or one vote or two does not much matter.

The second is more direct and is used on more important occasions. In this, the lobbyist cannot afford to take chances that no one will ask him where his delegation stands. So he buys his target a dry martini or a whiskey and offers the information, subtly but forcefully.

The third is used for vital matters. Nothing is left to chance. The lobbyist corners his target and figuratively twists his arm, not only stating his position but also pleading for the right kind of vote. In this, he is permitted to appeal to friendship, patriotism or any other emotion that might help.

A one-vote defeat, such as the French suffered on Algeria, pains the good lobbyist. He knows there was no chance of success if his side loses by five, 10 or 15 votes.

But where anything is as close as one vote, he believes the closeness should have been foreseen and protected against. The French mistake, in the opinion of the more seasoned lobbyists, was in using No. 1 tactics in a situation that called for No. 3.

The 10-year history of the United Nations has produced one classic of lobbying. It concerns the Briton charged with changing the views of a Latin American at the San Francisco conference to organize the world organization. The Latin was elusive, the Briton, thought, deliberately so.

One day, the Briton spotted his target going into the washroom. Other delegates affirm that, as they left the washroom, they could hear the lobbyist saying through a locked door:

"So nice to have finally found you, your excellency. I know you would like to know..."

CAST A LONG SHADOW, by Wayne D. Overholzer (Macmillan, 1955, $2.75)

The locale of this story is laid in early New Mexico, where an unscrupulous land grant company buys the old Spanish Santone Grant and claims the land far beyond its original boundaries. The settlers in the Valley of the Wall, who own their land by government deed, now face eviction and take up arms against the Company.

Matt Keenan, who had lived on the grant as a boy, comes back to the Valley and gets a job as spy for the Company. He is assigned the job of working for Dave Calvert, the leader of the settlers, in an effort to find out their plans. As he sees the injustices that are being done, he turns from the Company to champion the settlers' cause.

Matt begins to find himself as he fights side by side with Dave Calvert and the rest of the men who are trying to hold their land against the unscrupulous company agents, learning that big business comes only from within and that only the free man is the big man.

Mr. Overholzer has turned a critical and freshly appraising eye upon the Sen and events of the period of which he writes and the resulting novel is a realistic one of rich vitality and variety.

Inside the Soviet Union

NINE SOVIET PORTRAITS, by Raymond A. Bauer, assisted by Edward Waskoluk (John Wiley and the Technology Press of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 196 pos., $3.55.)

Based mainly on hundreds of Harvard University interviews with former Russians, these well-documented portraits give a broad picture of life today in the Soviet Union. The best are on the factory director and the Communist party district secretary. They give a detailed description of the complex, often contradictory, Soviet industrial and administrative machinery.

Other portraits are a student, woman collective farmer, woman doctor, housewife, writer and tractor driver. The account of the secret agent is necessarily sketchy. It indicates these agents, except in higher ranks, are weak-willed, often are coerced into their work, lack enthusiasm, are heavy drinkers.

Underlying themes of Russian citizens are a terror of the secret police, chronic material shortages, extreme pressure to work to one's limit for a drab living, the "all-pervasive politicalization of life," extra-legal activity to get around bureaucratic red-tape.

Raymond A. Bauer has been associated with Russian study projects at Harvard and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is the author of "The New Man in Soviet Psychology."

Champion of British Rights

FITZ, by J. P. R. Wallis (St. Martin's Press, $4.50.)

Sir Percy Fitzpatrick ("Fitz") remains known only as the author of an enchanting story for children, "Jock of the Bushveld," although he lived a full and active life (1862-1931) during an exceptionally formative period in South African history. In this biography Professor Wallis, formerly of the University of Pretoria, correctly lays emphasis on Fitzpatrick's activities as a champion of British rights against the Boer Government of Paul Kruger. "Fitz" was not always as level-headed as he was clear-sighted, and his association with the notorious Jameson Raid brought him imprisonment by the Boers. Now that the days of Kruger have apparently returned for English-speaking South Africans, it's too bad "Fitz" isn't around with his eloquent pen to plead their cause.

THOMAS L. STOKES

Administration Split on Public Power

AN INTERESTING DIVISION has developed in the Eisenhower Administration's inner circles over water resource conservation policy and the responsibility the Government should exercise in its various aspects, including production and distribution of electric power.

The division, which came to a head in the President's Cabinet, is unusual in the way the line has been drawn. The influence of the East, which is less affected by this issue, is found to be exerted on behalf of more federal direction of, and participation in, development and distribution of power. On the other hand, the West, where there are still the untapped water resources potentials requiring large-scale development.

It is in the West, too, where there are still the untapped water resources potentials requiring large-scale development.

Brownell vs. McKay.

The difference is pin-pointed, on the one hand, in Attorney General Herbert Brownell, who is from New York and identifies with the eastern wing of the party which always has been moderately progressive on domestic issues.

On the other hand, favoring a narrow local partnership policy, he discovered the demand of the Interior Department, namely, Secretary of Interior Douglas McKay, former Governor of Oregon, and Assistant Secretary Fred G. Aandahl, former Governor of North Dakota.

The conflict was dramatized in a rather explosive public hearing before a House Government Operations subcommittee. There Assistant Secretary Aandahl admitted that he had been sitting for several weeks on a formal opinion by Attorney General Brownell sent to Secretary McKay.

It held that the Interior Department under the law must permit a co-operative and municipal group in Georgia to get preference in purchase of electricity from the Government dam across the Savannah river at Clark's Hill above Augusta, Ga.

Ruling Is Revealed.

The 37 co-operatives and municipalities, banded together in the Georgia Electric Membership Corporation, have been pushed around and plagued by delays and proposals to alter proposals by the Georgia Power Co., which, itself, is seeking to control the power and its distribution from the Government dam built at the taxpayers' expense.

WEALTH OF STYLES IN PORTRAIT SHOW

Paintings and Sculptures at Guild Reflect Jury's Liberal Views.

By HOWARD DERRICKSON

Portraiture, despite its virtual exclusion from general art shows in recent years, is by no means a neglected craft among St. Louis area painters and sculptors. Fresh vitality in this ancient art is reflected in a full-scale show that opened yesterday at the Artists' Guild, 812 Union boulevard.

The wealth of styles employed is testimony to the breadth of vision of the jurors, Charles Galt, portrait artist, and Mrs. Edwin Grossman, City Art Museum lecturer. From 133 entries of artists living within 50 miles of the city, they selected 58 diverse works, just filling both guild galleries.

Extremes include "Self-Portrait," Alexandra Korsakoff-Galston's now-you-see-me-now-you-don't visual puzzle. Oliver Steidemann's tightly painted, illustrative "Jeanne"; Rodney Winfield's mystical, symbolic "Portrait of Generations"; Helen M. Smith's loose, cubist "Italian Boy"; and David Norton's "Joan," a surrealist ensemble of drapery, pottery and physiognomy, with a human hand unexplainably emerging from a water jug.

Craftsmanship and quality, rather than bizarre invention, mark the place-winners, announced Friday, and also, of course, the distinguished portrait that is being shown by Charles Galt himself.

James B. Fisher Jr., who was awarded first, is represented by two pictures notable for brushwork that is always fresh and free. The sitters' own ease and naturalness of manner shine through a most painterly technique, never lacking in care yet rich in casual charm.

Tom Cowley's "Puff," a water color chosen for second place, has a linear sensitivity recalling Toulouse-Lautrec. Stella Pearlmuter's third-place oil and wax painting emphasizes textures and cubist planes of light.

Those given honorable mention, all winners of numerous previous prizes, contribute works interesting for both subject matter and for mastery of style and technique. Sculptor Loyd Mose is showing a head of Lord Haverly, a poet formerly of the English departments of Washington University and Taylor School; Virginia Moberly Schuster, a lifelike impressionist oil, "Mother," and Siegfried Reinhardt, a monumental introspective "Self Portrait."

The hanging is balanced nicely in interest and in weight. Large paintings in opposite corners, for instance, are animated, subtle likenesses of artists by their relatives—Dorothy Quest's portrait of her husband, Charles, and Aimee Schweig's of her daughter, Martyl.

Other exhibitors: B. Boefler Brenner, Mildred Scherer, Rita M. Carr, W. D. Crowell, Norma Dirks Essert, Mabel Edsall, Katie Berry Feucht, Lucille Grimm, Mary Gronemeyer, Pöbal Hefelinger, Chester Huntley, Amour Krupnick, Florence Lyon, Adele McCull, Dominic Martini.

Paul Marquis, Charles Morgenthaler, Shirley Oberheide, Irma Oefelein, Laura Poepsel, Patricia Paulus, Elizabeth Phelan, Harriet Reinhardt, Cynthia Rupe, Audrey B. Schatz, Robert Solomon, Elizabeth Stanford, Patricia Kamp Turmo, Thelma Natter Webb and Eleanor Zacher.

The show will close Oct. 25.

Funeral services for Victor P. Ettinger, retired Southwestern Bell Telephone engineer, will be held Wednesday at Waterloo, Ia. Mr. Ettinger died yesterday of a heart attack at his home at the Gatesworth Hotel. He was 73 years old.

Mr. Ettinger retired in 1947 after 42 years in the telephone industry. He joined the Missouri and Kansas Telephone Co. in Kansas City as a draftsman, and was transferred to Southwestern Bell in St. Louis in 1917 as a transmission and protection engineer for eastern Missouri, Illinois and Arkansas.

ART MUSEUM PRINT SHOW BY 37 MODERN ITALIANS

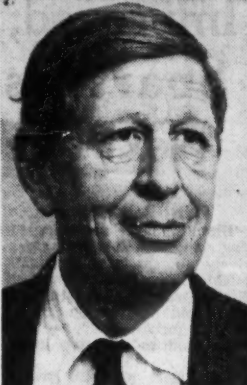

An exhibition of 82 prints by 37 contemporary Italian artists opened today in lower-floor galleries U, V and W at City Art Museum. Thirteen of those artists presented have paintings or sculptures in the museum's new comprehensive display of Italian art running through Nov. 14.

Eight successive proofs of "A Very Old Turtle," color lithograph by Filippo de Pisis, have been arranged along one wall as a demonstration of how such a print is made.

The display, on loan from the Binet Print Gallery of Brimfield, Mass., will leave here Nov. 30 for Minneapolis. There it will be a companion show for a smaller version of the Italian painting and sculpture exhibition, which fills five galleries here.

Push-Button Age Is Cramping Poet's Style, W. H. Auden Says

Subject Matter Limited, Pulitzer Prize Winner Asserts—His Test of Good Poem.

W. H. AUDEN

Modern poetry is often called difficult, but the same charge could be made against good poetry of any age, W. H. Auden, Pulitzer Prize-winning poet, said here last night.

There are riddles in modern poetry, but this does not necessarily mean the poems are obscure, Auden declared. The test of a good poem is that the reader feels the explanation of the riddle, when given him by a critic, is a natural one, rather than unfair, he continued.

The English-born Auden, holder of the King George Poetry Medal, spoke to more than 300 persons at Washington University in the third of four 1955 talks in the Oreo E. Scott Symposium, "The Writer and His Public."

The 48-year-old poet declared modern poetry was really being born before World War I, and that men of his generation can only be colonizers, not explorers, in this field.

Reason for Change.

"The change in the arts has taken place for the same reason as the change in our way of life; civilization has become more mechanized and complex," Auden said.

Increased mechanization reduces the field about which a poet can write, because it has dehumanized so many processes formerly performed by hand, Auden said. "A poet can write about a man slaying a dragon, but not about a man pushing a button that releases a bomb," he remarked.

Improved technology has helped the artist by making the entire past come alive, through records, books and films, thus expanding his knowledge of tradition, he said. Formerly an artist could only learn of his immediate past, relying upon the word-of-mouth stories of his elders, he added.

"Now that so many sounds and sights present themselves to the artist in everyday life, he must spend a tremendous amount of time simply in not hearing and not seeing," in order to remain sensitive to important objects," Auden asserted.

Poetry Won't Earn Living.

"The poet can be sure of only one thing about society: It will never let him earn a living simply by writing poetry," Auden, a lecturer and teacher as well as poet, declared.

Perhaps the day will come, he suggested, when poets will be taught a skilled manual trade, as part of their apprenticeship in the writing craft, so that they can be sure of

CATHOLICS TO HOLD MISSION SUNDAY

Special Collection—Pastors Tell Parishioners of Need.

Catholic missions throughout the world were the subject of sermons in all Catholic churches in the St. Louis area yesterday in preparation for a special collection Sunday to support such work. The day will be called Mission Sunday.

The special collection will be for the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, the official mission-aid agency of the Catholic Church. It supports all Catholic missions and missionaries throughout the world.

The Rev. Alvin J. Acton, assistant pastor of Blessed Sacrament Church, told his congregation that Catholic missionaries now maintain 3400 dispensaries, 1900 orphanages, 1200 hospitals, 280 homes for the aged and 51,000 schools. Last year they cared for more than 63,000,000 orphans, aged, sick and victims of leprosy, most of them non-Catholics, he said.

The Rev. Arthur V. Peet, mission director for St. Louis county, reminded parishioners of St. Joseph's Church in Clayton that the mission society supported the Catholic church in the St. Louis area from 1826 to 1872.

Members of St. Margaret's Church were urged by the Rev. Charles W. Hofer, mission director for South St. Louis, to forget their own needs and the needs of their parish on Mission Sunday and instead think only of the needs of "Christ's parish," the missions.

ST. LOUIS U. DEAN SPEAKS BEFORE DENTISTS' GROUP

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—Some dental problems "now being taught in dental schools are very complex and have their origin in the same biological soil as medical problems," Dr. Lee Roy Main, dean of the St. Louis University school of dentistry, said here yesterday.

Speaking before the American College of Dentists, Dr. Main said more than 15,000 dentists have taken advantage of postgraduate courses to keep abreast of developments in dentistry. Most schools now offer advanced courses, he said.

The number of students attending dental schools has increased from 7500 to 12,000 in the last 10 years, he said. The number of schools has increased from 39 to 43 in that period.

Funeral services for Oscar A. Kreitner, an engineer for the East Side Levee and Sanitary District, were held today at St. Joseph's Catholic Church in East St. Louis. Burial was in Mount Carmel Cemetery.

Mr. Kreitner, 62 years old, died Friday at his home, 1360 Summit avenue, East St. Louis. Surviving is his wife; a daughter, Mrs. Vince Schifferdecker; five brothers and one sister.

Budweisers Take Second in Match-Game Bowling

Strohs Win Tourney by Three Pins

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 17—The Budweisers of St. Louis, totaled 12,540 for 12 games on the Milwaukee Bowl alleys here over the weekend to finish second in the annual Bowling Proprietors' Association of American team eliminations and thus qualify to bowl for the match-game championship next year.

The Strohs of Detroit, holders of the match-game title, overcame a 122-pin deficit in the final block to nose out the St. Louisans by three pins with a 12,543 total. The Strohs bowled 3097 in the final three games.

Dick Weber, buds' anchor man, needed strikes on his last two pitches to gain first place. He got the first one but he was light on his next and left pins 2 and 5 standing.

It was the fifth consecutive victory for the Detroit quintet in the elimination tourney.

The St. Louisans, members of the All-Star League, opened with a 2984 series and then came back with 3390, the highest ever rolled in the eliminations. The big count included a 1200 game, another tourney record.

In the two blocks yesterday, the Buds hit 3194 in the third block and then finished with 2972.

Pat Patterson was high average man for the Budweisers with 219.3 for the 12 games. Dick Weber had 213.5, Don Carter 212.5, Billy Welu 200.1, and Ray Bluth 199.4.

The championships to be decided in a home and home match, 24 games total pins to count, will be rolled next Jan. 14, 15, 21 and 22, first 12 games here.

The Gresedicks, another St. Louis team, finished fifth with a 12,165 total, while the Hermanns, 11,731, took eighteenth place in the 42-team field.

The Telcos of Cleveland took third place with a 12,307 total.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 17 (UP)—The Cincinnati Reds called up Charlie Rabe, promising southpaw pitcher, from Seattle of the Pacific Coast League last night. Rabe had a 21-7 record with Columbia of the Sally League this past season and was promoted to Seattle.

36-Year-Old Pitcher Wins For Florissant

By Neal Russo

It felt like a winter league play-off—54 degrees—and the bats behaved like icicles as Florissant surprised Creve Coeur, 3-2, yesterday in an old-fashioned pitching duel.

There was little to choose between the rival right-handers, 36-year-old Percy Henderson for visiting Florissant, and husky 21-year-old Nelson Faron in the opener of a best-of-three title series in the County Baseball League.

Each struck out 10 and walked two and each yielded five hits. However, one of the Florissant blows was a fifth-inning home run by Harold Burbach. The drive cleared the fence in dead center—about 375 feet—and accounted for the only untainted run. Thus, it could well have been a 1-0 ball game.

Creve Coeur, the defending champion, continued in a batting slump as Henderson, a wily veteran of the St. Louis Munys and several seasons in the Cleveland Indians' farm system, used a darting knuckler, a good curve and a wide variety of other pitches. He changed speeds better than any record player and held Creve Coeur hitless in six of the nine innings.

Sluggish Burbach got Florissant off to a good start by leading off with a single in the first inning. On his steal of second base, the catcher's throw went awry and Burbach moved all the way to third. Then he scored on Lloyd Lowe's first of two hits, a double to center.

After Burbach's circuit drive made it 3-0 in the fifth, Creve Coeur's Tigers broke the ice in the home half on an infield error, a wild pitch and Jake Hozel's sacrifice fly. Singles by Don Wennemann and Harold Myers and Lowe's error produced another tally in the eighth, but Henderson stopped the rally by getting Nels Faron to pop to Lowe.

Creve Coeur must win next Sunday at Florissant to prolong a season that started back on April 24. That means the County League season already has run as long as the major league season. If a third game is necessary, it will be played at Florissant.

Pat O'Reilly, the smiling Irishman who manager Florissant, points out that "We have no fingers; every one of our players lives in Florissant." O'Reilly and his pitcher, Dave Bartosch, played on the 1948 Carondelet Sunday Morning Club team that just missed the Muny title.

Henderson concentrated his 10 strikeouts from the second through the seventh inning. Nelson Faron, who whiffed the side in the second, got every Florissant starter on strikes except O'Reilly and Jack Gray.

Creve Coeur, AB, R, H, E. Henderson 10, Faron 10, U—Behrens, West and Leincker.

A 36-hole total of 159 by Kay Johnston brought her the title in the Forest Park Golf Club's fall handicap event. Mrs. Edward Walsh was second with 160.

In Class A, Mrs. John Brohan won with 175 and Miss Wanda Smith had 180. Miss Wilma Donenbach topped Class B with 79, followed by Mrs. Lil Heller with 81.

In the nine-hole Class C competition, Doris Eberhardt won with 74, followed by Miss Lucille Smith with 80.

In the annual homecoming tournament at Triple A, open only to former champions, Tony Haverkamp was low with a 70.

Bus Remley and Joe Evans each had 71, Frank Lubinski 74, and Otto Stamm 75.

Pastorate to Devote His Time to Olympics

LONG BEACH, Calif., Oct. 17 (UP)—Rev. Bob Richards has announced that he will resign as pastor of a local church to devote more time to an evangelistic campaign and to get in shape for the 1956 Olympics.

Richards is two-time Olympic pole vault champion.

Washington U. Sailors

Second in Regatta

On the strength of their second place in the regatta on Alton Lake last Saturday, members of the Washington University Sailing Club plan to compete in a similar meet at Michigan U. next weekend.

Purdue's crews won the regatta here; Washington was second; Cincinnati U., third; Illinois Inst. of Technology fourth and Marquette fifth.

With five entries, the meet here gained the status of a "major" regatta under the Midwest Collegiate Sailing Association. Eight or 10 Washington U. club members will go to Ann Arbor next Friday. One boat will be used in competition with Michigan, Wisconsin, and others in addition to those schools that raced here.

Amateur Boxing

Elmer Howell, matchmaker for the Greater St. Louis Coaches' Association, has arranged two more bouts for the Grand Theater card Wednesday night.

Joey Beceri, Lincoln A.C., is to meet Gary Manley, South Broadway A.C., in a 118-pound novice bout, while Tom Drago, Bosco Boys' Club, is to oppose Mercy Mendoza, Lincoln A.C., in a 100-pound sub-novice match.

St. Mary's and DuBourg Triumph in Opening C.A.C. Loop Games

Mercy Finishes Minus 14 Yards Rushing in Its 12 to 0 Defeat

By John J. Archibald

A line that barreled in so fast it had Mercy going backward all afternoon and a backfield strengthened by previously injured runners made St. Mary's look like the trophy-hungry outfit of last year as it opened its Catholic Athletic Conference football season yesterday. The Dragons raked Mercy, 12 to 0, for their fourth straight victory.

St. Mary's next opponent, DuBourg, started with a 27-6 triumph over DeAndreis. It was the second win against three defeats for DuBourg.

So overpowered were Mercy ball carriers that they came up with a minus-14 on the afternoon's rushing attempts. Time after time some small Mercy gain would be more than wiped out by a pack of green-clad St. Mary's tacklers, smothering a ground play in the Mercy backfield or chasing a would-be passer like a fugitive.

Mercy was further handicapped by the absence of its No. 1 quarterback, Jim Nolan, who was hurt in practice Thursday, but it is difficult to imagine any one man giving St. Mary's much difficulty.

Two Newcomers Appear

The St. Mary's offensive line was not as brilliant, but it did well enough to enable Dragon ball carriers to make 15 first downs. Two backs making their first starts for St. Mary's, Andy Rios and Don Henry, aided an already strong attack that had helped beat Cathedral, Sumner and Southwest in earlier games.

Rios was making his very first varsity appearance, since suffering a dislocated elbow on the first day of contact work. A 185-pound junior, he ripped off considerable yardage for the Dragons and scored one of their two touchdowns. In the third quarter he bulled through the line for four yards and the TD.

Coach Vern Winter's St. Mary's team began its initial scoring drive late in the first quarter on its own 31. A 14-yard pass from Stan Kosteck to Bob DeGreeff got the march under way. In the second quarter a pass interference penalty on a poor throw helped St. Mary's by putting them on Mercy's 10, and after losing two yards on the next play, Ray Ahillen smacked through the line for a touchdown. Ahillen was a starter in St. Mary's other three games, but was held back yesterday so Henry could get in.

Henry, a transfer from DuBourg, made several good runs early in the contest, but Ahillen played quite a bit. Bill Condon, veteran St. Mary's halfback, was another steady gainer for the Dragons.

Off to Early Lead. Mercy's only successful offense came on passes by substitute quarterback Paul Brauner, several of them to End Jim Beckmann, but several heaves were intercepted and Mercy was unable to threaten. Rios's touchdown in the third quarter all but sewed up the game for the defending champion, St. Mary's team.

DuBourg opened up with a pair of touchdowns in the first quarter against DeAndreis, but had a struggle on its hands from there on. The Wildcats came back with a TD in the second quarter, but DeAndreis scored later in the period and added another in the third quarter.

Quarterback Dave Rasure scored both of DuBourg's early touchdowns, but then was removed from the game after being shaken up, though not seriously injured. Rasure climaxed a 70-yard drive by plunging the final two, and then sprinted 21 yards for the second score.

In the second quarter, a sophomore—one of 17 non-seniors to see considerable action for the building DuBourg squad—ran 25 yards to a touchdown. Jerry Naughton, a junior, went 30 yards for the final TD. Richard Garger accounted for DeAndreis's touchdown, plunging three yards after a drive from midfield.

In the other C.A.C. opener, McBride defeated Laboure, 27 to 0, in a Saturday game. In a Catholic League game at Perryville, the host St. Vincent team buried Coyle, 32 to 12. Bill Moore scored twice for St. Vincent, catching a 35-yard pass from Ken Cissell for the first and running 39 yards to another. Glen Zellner, Leroy Elder and Lee Prost also scored for the winners. Jim Hollman and Tom Meyer made Coyle's touchdowns.

Moberly to See Hawks Tonight

An intra-squad game tonight at Moberly, Mo., will get the St. Louis Hawks warmed up for a seven-game exhibition series with the Minneapolis Lakers that starts at St. Peter, Minn., Wednesday night.

The Hawks walloped the Fort Wayne Pistons, 80 to 54, in a contest Saturday night. The St. Louisans were particularly happy about that practice victory, for last year the Pistons trimmed the Hawks 11 out of 12 times in National Basketball Association play.

Chris Harris, a newcomer from Dayton University, continued his fine play by scoring 16 points against the Pistons.

STOCKS UP, FOR FIRST MONDAY IN LAST FOUR

Rise Not Very Great and Sales Only 1,480,000 Shares—Market Narrow.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17 (AP)—After declining sharply on three straight Mondays, the stock market advanced today in a quiet manner.

The rise wasn't very great at any time, and prices subsided from their best at the close. Gains went to around 2 points at the outside in key areas and less than a point in most.

(The United Press said that Wall Street was encouraged by the fact that the market had overcome its Monday selling jinx. It had dropped each Monday since President Eisenhower's illness—31.89 points in industrials on Monday, Sept. 26; 10.92 points on Monday, Oct. 3, and 13.27 points on Monday, Oct. 10. The features today were a sharp drop in turnover—a new trading low since Aug. 22; and wide fluctuations in some high-priced issues.)

(Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was 1.45 points higher at 446.13 at the close. The 20 railroads dropped 14 of a point to 148.33, while the 15 utilities rose 22 to 61.70.)

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up 40 cents at $168.10 with the industrial component ahead 60 cents, rails up 10 cents, and utilities higher by 20 cents.

The market was narrow with only 1,480,000 individual issues traded, lowest in two months of which 549 advanced and 315 declined with nine new highs and 18 new lows for the year scored.

Business was dull at only 1,480,000 shares. That compared with 1,640,000 shares traded Friday when the market closed mixed.

Steels, motors, coppers, and some rails and oils did well on the advance. Aluminum, chemicals and others were higher. The rest of the market was quietly steady or mixed.

Du Pont stock ahead 7 1/2 at 220 in a continuation of its recent strength in the midst of Wall Street rumors that directors met in Wilmington, Del., during the morning in a routine session. The stock thereupon dropped to 210 1/2. Third quarter earnings of $2.26 were reported as compared with $1.52 a year ago.

Among advancing stocks were New York Central, Texas Co., Johns-Manville, Magna Copper, International Nickel, American Tobacco, Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Lockheed, and Raytheon.

This is the first Monday that the stock market has been able to break the "jinx" of heavily falling prices since the President suffered his heart attack.

London stocks were higher today, the Financial Times index gaining 1 full point at 189.2.

BUSINESS WORLD

NEW YORK, Oct. 17 (AP)—E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Co. reported that its common stock earnings for the first nine months of 1955 were 40 percent greater than for the like period last year. The company reported earnings of $6.24 a share, broken down to $4.71 from the chemical firm's operating activities and $1.47 from General Motors stock dividends. The company attributed the profit increase to the greater physical volume of sales.

duPont earnings for the third quarter of 1955 were reported at $2.62 compared with $1.52 for like period a year ago. The earnings report followed a routine meeting of the firm's board of directors. There have been rumors of a possible split of duPont stock, but nothing was forthcoming, either confirming or denying.

National Department Stores The price of zinc was advanced half a cent to 13 1/2 cents a pound, East St. Louis, Monday by at least two major producers. Others were expected to follow suit shortly. Early in 1954 it fell to 9 1/2 cents, after reaching a postwar high of 19 1/2 in late 1951.

The nation's steel mills will operate at 96.1 per cent of rated capacity this week and produce 2,320,000 tons of ingots and steel for castings, the American Iron and Steel Institute said. SOYBEAN STRENGTH FEATURE OF MARKET

Wheat Prices Mixed With Corn Futures Up in Trades.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17 (AP)—Soybeans bounded up 3 cents at times in an otherwise ranged grain market on the Board of Trade today. Buying in beans came in part from previous short sellers. While receipts at Chicago were heavy, grainmen felt that from this point onward producers would not be anxious to sell their newly harvested bean crop. Corn firmed despite ample receipts on cash corn. Here, too, short covering was a factor in the market's strength. Wheat and oats held around previous closing levels with oats showing an easier trend.

FRENCH ENVOY SAYS REDS INCITE RIOTING IN AFRICA

Communist Agitation Spreading, He Asserts—Gradual Self-Rule Is Goal.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 (UP)—French Ambassador Maurice Couve de Murville said yesterday "there is a Communist influence in those troubles that we are having" in riot-torn North Africa.

"Communist agitation is spreading all over Africa now, all the Mediterranean area," de Murville said. "You've seen these difficulties in Egypt now with selling of Soviet arms to Egypt."

The French are trying to make sure that the Communists don't profit from the nationalist feelings of natives in Africa, he said.

Discussing the African situation with Representative Keating (Rep.) of New York on a television program, de Murville said he expects the French delegation to retake its seat in the United Nations General Assembly "as soon as possible."

Warning to U. N.
The delegation walked out to warn that the U.N. should not interfere in the Algerian problem, which the French consider a domestic issue.

"We felt bound to make that move to impress on the people (at the U.N.) that they shouldn't go outside the boundaries of the Charter," he said, "and in doing that we think that we've rendered a service to everyone."

He said the French some day will grant independence to the strife-torn area of North Africa. But it must be a gradual process. He said the process has begun in Tunisia, which "has a quite independent government now."

Heart of Problem.
De Murville said conditions for peace have improved since the recent summit conference at Geneva. He said the heart of the European peace problem is to get the French and the Germans to live together and his government is making every effort toward that goal.

Although no specific problems were settled at Geneva, he said, the conference did much to "dissipate the idea that a hot war was the normal consequence of a cold war."

He said President Eisenhower contributed most to the success of the conference "because the United States being the major military power in the world and especially the major atomic power, it was good to have the chief of that country take the lead toward creating the impression that nobody wanted war."

Compared to Old Fashioned Oils, this new All-Weather Oil can actually double the life of an engine!

Be Weather-Wise about your oil! Change to TROP-ARTIC

EASIER STARTING. TROP-ARTIC Motor Oil won't get too thick even when the thermometer drops below zero. Because it's an all-weather oil, it flows easily at all temperatures. This saves gasoline, too.

UP TO 45% LESS OIL CONSUMPTION. Ordinary "winter" oil that gets too thin when it heats up may burn away. Modern TROP-ARTIC Motor Oil resists thinning.

40% LESS ENGINE WEAR. Because TROP-ARTIC stays on the job at all temperatures, even at extremely high engine heat, it extends engine life remarkably.

IT'S GUARANTEED! Change to TROP-ARTIC All-Weather Motor Oil and use it for ten days or up to 1,000 miles. If you aren't completely satisfied that TROP-ARTIC lives up to all the claims made for it, go to any Phillips 66 Dealer and he will replace it with any other available oil you prefer. That's how sure we are that you'll be delighted with the performance you get from TROP-ARTIC All-Weather Motor Oil. We guarantee it!

AIRLINER WITH 38 ABOARD CATCHES FIRE, LANDS SAFE

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 17 (UP)—A twin-engine Eastern Air Lines plane which caught fire over Morgantown, W. Va., landed safely at the old Allegheny county airport yesterday with 38 persons aboard.

Capt. Alex Blair landed on two flat tires after dousing a fire in the engines while the plane was flying at 11,000 feet. None of the 35 passengers or three crew members was injured.

A faulty heater in the de-icing equipment touched off the fire, a company spokesman said.

Mayor Addresses Rally Marking Organization's 75th Anniversary.

The Salvation Army, whose leaders were prevented from holding street meetings when the organization was established in St. Louis 75 years ago, has become recognized as "a great instrument for good in our community," Mayor Raymond R. Tucker said yesterday.

In an address to the group's seventy-fifth anniversary rally at Kiel Auditorium, Mayor Tucker remarked that the unfriendly reception given to the Army's leaders initially illustrated how "we shun new methods of attacking our problems."

The organization's workers, he said, "have extended a helping hand to homeless women and children, to destitute men who walk our streets, to alcoholics and delinquent girls."

"They have not only offered temporal assistance but they have provided sympathetic understanding and spiritual counsel in their hour of need."

Mayor Tucker related the story of Salvation Army Commissioner George Scott Ralston, who conducted meetings among ice skaters on the Mississippi river in 1880, after St. Louis and not let him hold gatherings in the city.

Col. William G. Harris of Chicago, chief secretary of the Army's central territory, told the rally that the organization has the same spirit now that it had in the difficult period of its establishment.

Col. Harris, whose experience in the Salvation Army ranges from missionary work among headhunters to editorial direction of all publications, illustrated his talk with examples showing the devotion of Army officers to the ideals of the organization.

Aloys P. Kaufmann, president of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, was master of ceremonies at the rally.

INDIANA GOVERNOR WITHDRAWS SOME TROOPS IN STRIKE

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 17 (AP)—Gov. George N. Craig today ended martial law in Richmond and announced National Guard troops in the Perfect Circle strike areas in two other cities would be reduced by 400 men.

The Governor said troops will remain at Hagerstown and also in New Castle and the rest of Henry county, in east-central Indiana. They will number about 600.

The Governor acted today after conferring with National Guard officers, representatives of the state police and two federal mediators.

He decided to leave troops in Henry county, he said, because the guard commander said he could not guarantee against a recurrence of the riot if they were withdrawn.

Craig said he had indications that both the company and the striking CIO-United Auto Workers have "an increased desire to negotiate." However, no new meetings have been arranged.

10 RUSSIANS TO INSPECT CALIFORNIA HOMES TODAY

BERKELEY, Calif., Oct. 17 (AP)—The 10-man Soviet housing delegation has a day-long tour of seven bay area home developments scheduled today. Yesterday most of them loafed, a respite from their fast-paced national tour. They arrived Saturday night and will leave for Los Angeles tomorrow.

While seven of the group enjoyed leisurely sight-seeing in San Francisco yesterday, the other three, including I. K. Kozulla, the delegation's chief, inspected farm buildings at the University of California's agricultural campus at Davis.

Last night the Russians gave a dinner at the Claremont Hotel here in honor of Earl Smith, El Cerrito home-builder who is president of the National Association of Home Builders. The association is sponsoring and paying for the trip.

America Continues Its Leadership

TRANS-OCEANIC JET AIRLINERS

Establish New Jet Transport Age

Pan American World Airways has announced the purchase of 20 Boeing 707 and 25 Douglas DC-8 jet transports for trans-oceanic air travel. They are designed to fly at 9½ miles a minute, spanning the Atlantic in under 7 hours! They will be powered with two versions of a twin-spool axial flow jet engine, designed, developed and produced by Pratt & Whitney Aircraft.

The introduction of these new aircraft into service between 1958 and 1960 will mark the real beginning of the commercial jet age. Here is another example of America's continuing leadership in air transportation since its beginning in the late 1920's.

This significant new achievement will be the result of teamwork by four world-famous organizations in aviation. Pan American pioneered air travel over both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. Today its service is world-wide, and only recently it completed its 50,000th Atlantic crossing. Airplanes built by both Boeing and Douglas have played a large part in the growth of commercial air travel, as well as in the country's national defense. Pratt & Whitney Aircraft engines pioneered in trans-oceanic travel and today are flying on airlines all over the civilized world.

From 1935, when Pan American's Sikorsky Clipper first flew the Pacific route, until today, virtually every transport aircraft used in over-ocean travel by both foreign and U. S. operators has been designed, built and powered by the American aviation industry.

Pratt & Whitney Aircraft is proud to be a member of the team that is carrying forward this great tradition.

SWEPT-WING BOEING 707 (far left), has been flying in an initial version for more than a year. It will carry up to 125 passengers at 9½ miles per minute.
DOUGLAS DC-8 (left foreground), latest in a long line of famous transports, will fly at 575 mph with 131 passengers. Both will cross the Atlantic in under 7 hours.

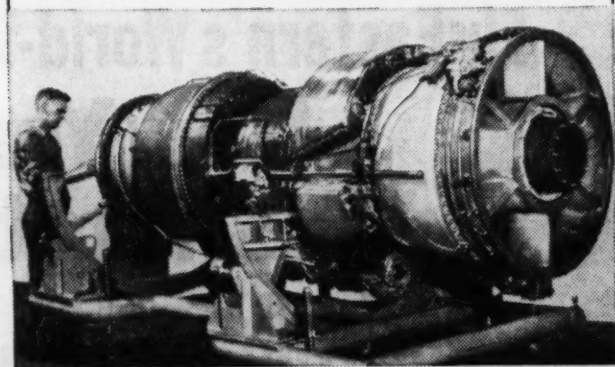

The big turbojet engine below is one of two versions of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft's twin-spool axial flow jet engines which will power the Boeing 707 and the Douglas DC-8. It is the most powerful now in quantity production anywhere. Sponsored by the U. S. Air Force, designed, developed and produced in large quantities by Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, it powers the modern first-line Air Force and Navy aircraft listed on the right.

DEVASTATING FLOODS RETURN TO EAST

Torrential rains, flooding six northeastern states, have caused thousands of persons to evacuate their homes in the second disastrous flood to strike the region in two months. Property damage ran into millions of dollars as swollen rivers spilled over their banks, and at least 42 persons lost their lives in the raging floodwaters. Above, water swirling through a street in the residential section of Stamford, Conn., yesterday, as an amphibious duck rescues flood victims from stalled trucks. Residents of flooded homes await their turn on steps of their dwellings. Below, houses and automobiles, partially buried in silt, are strewn along the banks of the Norwalk river at Norwalk, Conn., in the wake of violent flood currents.

Can Durocher Hit In the TV League?

By John Crosby

SO LEO DUROCHER is going to work for NBC as an ambassador of good will. An ambassador of what? Leo has been accused of many things in his major league career but spreading good will was not one of them.

LEO DUROCHER

you learn statistics? In reform school? Whaddaya mean my spectacular only got a 22.7? Why you...

OF COURSE, as a talent scout, that's something else. He got Alvin Dark, didn't he? He uncovered Willie Mays. With Durocher in the game, CBS had just better have Jackie Gleason nailed to the floor. If Leo can't develop the stuff, he'll steal it. The competitive flame burns just as brightly in Leo's new field as in his old one, maybe even more brightly.

But I think somebody had better take Leo aside and explain there are some basic differences between baseball and broadcasting. Most basic of the differences: baseball has rules. I mean you can't steal first. That sort of thing. Three strikes and you're out. In the game he's entering, he'll find there's nothing so inflexible or so binding. You can steal anything, first included. And lots of time you don't get three strikes; mostly you just get one.

THEN THERE'S THE MATTER of talent. In baseball, any durned fool can recognize a good second baseman. I mean if he can run, throw, field and hit, he's a good second baseman. But the television game is loaded with people who can run, throw, field and hit and can't get a job. And on the other hand there's Ed Sullivan who can't run or throw or field or hit—and look at him.

Anyhow, welcome aboard, Leo. This ought to be very educational for you and also very instructive for the rest of us. I can't wait for that first spark of good will to burst forth. It could easily lay waste to the whole RCA building.

TO TURN to other matters, I see The New Yorker magazine comments about a guy whose picture appeared in a newspaper and who got a letter from an optical company advising him that his eyeglass frames were all wrong for him. "Do many people, we wonder, read publications from so special a viewpoint—the dentist brooding every time he spots a gap-toothed mouth, the service station attendant gasping at the low pressure in the tire of an actress' convertible?"

Well, I don't know about newspaper readers. But television viewers are the sharpest-eyed people in the world. I just heard from one of them: "Last night on the CBS television network 'Appointment With Adventure,' there was a play involving the return of a Confederate hero from the Civil War. The thing I Confidante hero from is in the technical direction, specifically the firearms. The firearms used in this play were not invented until 1873. The revolver in use throughout the Civil War and thereafter until the early 1870s used a separate charge of powder with loose percussion caps to secure ignition."

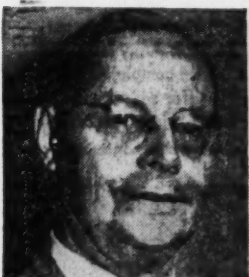

I TELL YOU, you can't get away with a thing. Here's another: "As a lover of Westerns I was watching Robert Montgomery's show starring Charlton Heston and in the tense scene where the bad man makes the good man switch britches with him, they both ostentatiously zipped up their trousers. Dun & Bradstreet reports that zippers were not in vogue then. If this becomes a habit, we might be forced to witness Gen. George Custer tidying up with an electric razor preparatory to Little Big Horn."

Yes, or maybe Gen. Grant watching television. Copyright, 1955, New York Herald Tribune Inc.

Family Values

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

FOREIGNERS frequently find family life in North America puzzling and difficult to comprehend. They can't quite get it straight in their minds just what our married couples want out of life and how they set about to get it. Moreover, "who's who" in the family confuses them; and the question of who's boss, usually quite clear in "the old country," seems vague over here.

DR. PAUL POPENOE

Dr. Popenoe is one of these who finds us "disorganized," maritally. "I have recently come to this country with my family on a mission connected with the armed services," he explains, "and we are all having a hard time deciding what the family on this continent is trying to accomplish. We have been reading your column with much interest, Dr. Popenoe, and we decided to ask you to tell us just what you consider the outstanding patterns are over here."

NO TWO FAMILIES are alike. Captain, but sociologist John Sirjanaki outlined eight "approved sentiments which express the American public's system of family values," in his opinion. I think he did a good job.

1. For both men and women, marriage is a dominating life goal. "Everybody ought to marry" and more than nine out of 10 actually do marry.

2. Marriages arranged by parents, and mercenary marriages, are both disapproved. "This Love and Love alone the world is seeking!"

3. A marriage is successful if husband and wife consider themselves happy. Children are believed to increase their happiness.

4. Youth is idolized. Everybody is a bit ashamed of growing old. The "ideal symbol" is an unmarried girl of 20 or thereabouts.

5. Children should be shielded from adult woes.

6. Sex activity should be limited to wedlock.

7. In the family roles of husband and wife, there is a division of labor based on sex. Some things are "men's work"; some things are "women's work." In general, the man's world is supposed to be superior in prestige.

8. In family living, the individual is considered more important than the group. It is more desirable to give the individual a chance for "self-expression," for attaining his individual ambitions, than to hold the group together.

ANY READER can decide for himself whether he thinks these are actually the accepted ideals of a large part of the population and whether he thinks there would be an advantage to change some of them.

Rodgers and Hammerstein Are Two Men Who Are as Different as They Are Alike

By Charles P. Arnot

This is the second of three articles on the lives and careers of two men who have given the world "Oklahoma," "South Pacific," and other hits Broadway musicals, and more than 500 songs.

(Copyright, 1955, by International News Service.)

ONE way or another, the whole history of the American musical theater is bound up in the lives of two men who are as different as they are alike.

Composer Richard Rodgers is a story-teller in music whose flying fingers turn out hit tunes with the quiet efficiency of an auditor. He rarely plays the piano for his own amusement.

Lyricist Oscar Hammerstein II is a "perambulatory" playwright-poet who may walk 10 miles during weeks of labor on an unforgettable 50-word refrain. He is only temperamental about writing lyrics—nothing else.

Both were born on New York's Upper East Side and went to Columbia University. Since youth, they have shared the same reverence for the theater. Both have apartments in Manhattan and comfortable retreats in the country. Over the past 25 years, they have maintained about the same standards of living—what their wives call "very middle class."

Both married attractive women named Dorothy following romances that blossomed at different times—on ocean trips to England. Both wives have had their own businesses—separately—as interior decorators. In music and the theater, they share the same meticulous tastes, the same burning drive for perfection. The theater has lifted them to the heights and plunged them to the depths. Their careers have linked the theatrical greats of today and yesterday, from Mae West to Mary Martin, from Lew Fields to Elia Pinza.

They have no thought of retiring, or of turning their creative talents into any form of work or note independent of the musical play.

Rodgers, 53, is seven years younger and several inches shorter than Hammerstein. He is taut and stocky with a great fund of nervous energy. He has no long hair, no garret, no Bohemian tendencies.

Interviewers invariably liken the unpretentious Rodgers to a businessman—more often than not setting on "stockbroker." It has been said he's the perfect example of what a composer should not look like.

HAMMERSTEIN, a rugged six-footer, has been compared in appearance to a construction foreman. He is relaxed, warm, serious, sensitive—above all, a complete optimist. Dorothy Hammerstein says that's his weakness—if he has one.

In his own eyes, the playwright confesses to being something of a phenomenon.

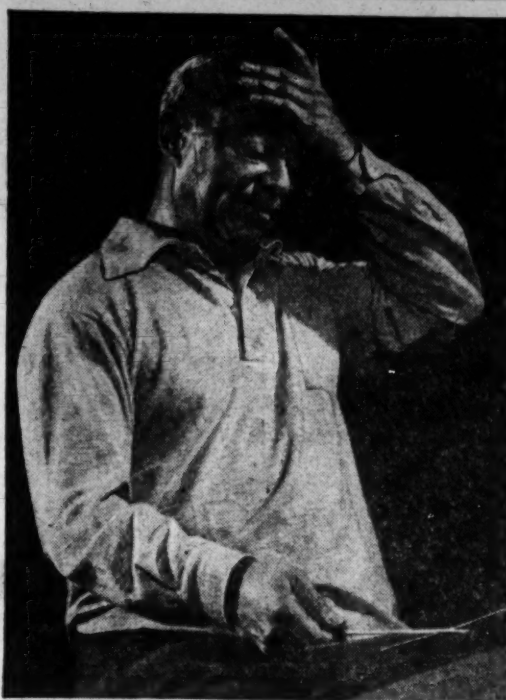

"It may be news that somebody is truly happy," he says. "But I am a man who believes he is happy." This inner happiness, he adds, stems from "having a happy home and family." He calls this his "greatest personal satisfaction."

It is a statistical fact that more people have seen the plays of Hammerstein than any other living playwright. It is an artistically-accepted fact that Rodgers is one of the three greatest living popular American composers, along with Cole Porter and Irving Berlin.

Over the years, Rodgers' music has been called sad, gay, folksy and even holy. One eminent critic offered this comparison: "Where Cole Porter electrifies you with his wit and sophistication and Irving Berlin captivates you with his pure, simple tunes, Dick Rodgers digs into your heart."

Since he fingered out a tune-fest little ditty called "Campfire Songs" at the age of 14, Rodgers figures he has written more than 1000 songs—some of them in less than five minutes. Many have been composed with paper and pencil, without the aid of a piano.

The secret of his success is that he considers himself a practical, down-to-earth man of the theater. And like any other man with a job, sits down and goes to work. Music never comes to him at unexpected moments. He is a theatrical composer who looks on the problem of writing songs as finding the right musical approach to a given dramatic situation. He produces melody only when in quest of it. Rodgers is indifferent to his surroundings when composing. It doesn't tire him. When creating the beguiling music for the colorful "Carousel," he sat undisturbed at the piano while his two daughters created minor bedlam in the living room.

When you hear a song called "The Next Time It Happens" from the next R & H musical, "Pipe Dream," which opens in New York on Nov. 30, with St. Louis-born Helen Traubel as the star, remember that it took Rodgers less than an hour to write the music—an hour interrupted by a dinner engagement.

"For me, the process of musical composition is a very rapid outpouring," Rodgers says. "I can't compose note by note, as though I were carving wood—a chip here, a chip there."

Rodgers' biggest single income item still is a memorable ballet entitled "Slughter on Tenth Avenue," which was introduced in a 1936 Broadway show called "On Your Toes."

That was during what Rodgers calls the "first chapter" of his professional career. His partner then was the brilliant, erratic and moody Lorenz Hart, who suffered a breakdown and died in 1943.

The 24-year partnership of Rodgers and Hart produced words and music for 30 Broadway shows and 20 movies. Most any day you still can hear some of their songs—"Blue Moon," "You Took Advantage of Me," "With a Song in My Heart," "Thou Swell," "Where's That Rainbow," "Ten Cents a Dance."

Rodgers was only 16 when Broadway heard his first song, a tune called "Any Old Place With You." At 23, Rodgers had three hits running simultaneously on the main stem. Partner Hart was then 30. Hit followed.

Notes on Caulking Compound. FOR sealing up cracks and crevices about the house, it's pretty hard to find anything that can beat caulking compound—a sort of putty like plastic that never becomes so hard that it cracks but which can be painted to match the surroundings.

Caulking compound can be used to fill joints between wood, between wood and masonry or between two pieces of masonry. It comes in many forms and that's what we'd like to tell you about today.

First of all there is bulk caulking compound that comes in a large container. It can be applied with a putty knife but it's easier with a caulking gun that works something like a grease gun. This is the least expensive form of caulking but filling the gun with the caulking compound is sort of messy. Applying it with a putty knife is hard work unless you are an expert.

Next there is a type of gun that takes a cartridge of composed of three a year—until the tinsel lure of Hollywood beckoned in 1930 Rodgers now recalls those three years in film's doldrums as the low point of his whole career. His studio let him write only six songs in one 12-month stretch.

Rodgers and Hart decided to return to New York. For the next two years, a discouraged Rodgers plunged $34,000 into debt without a single Broadway show. They finally joined with showman Billy Rose in an extravaganza called "Jumbo" and their fortune changed. In quick succession came such Rodgers and Hart smash hits as "Babes in Arms," "I Married an Angel," "Pal Joey" and "By Jupiter."

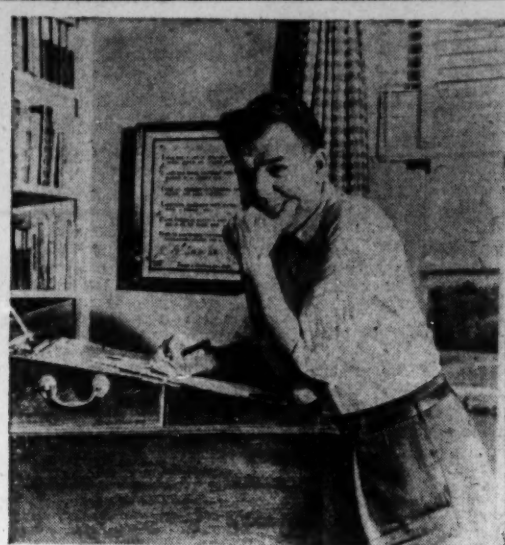

In "On Your Toes" Rodgers and Hart first employed ballet as an implement of plot development, drama and satirical humor. More and more, Rodgers used his music to intensify emotion, building up to the musical drama of "Oklahoma" and the succession of Rodgers and Hammerstein hits.

Hammerstein, too, has constantly explored new techniques and defied tradition. Who else would dare to create a smash hit in "South Pacific" by repeating four times "I'm in love" and then capping it with "I'm in love with a wonderful guy?" And who else could stage such a smashing comeback after 12 straight years of failure?

There were the golden '20s when the young Hammerstein triumphed with the great Jerome Kern and Sigmund Romberg in "The Desert Song," "Show Boat," "Sunny," "New Moon." Then came the great '30s when an ill-fated try at Hollywood marked the beginning of a series of flops which, with the exception of one success—lasted until 1942.

Something new in the field of caulking is the caulking tape. This is simply compound in tape form which you apply by forcing into the joint with your fingers or caulking tool. It does a nice neat job and is easy to handle.

Dogs can't reach your trash or garbage can suspended on the inside of breezeway door leading into garage. Concealed but convenient for both the housewife and collector.

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN II, AT HIS "STAND UP" DESK, SOMETIMES WALKS 10 MILES BACK AND FORTH IN HIS STUDY WHEN COMPOSING LYRICS FOR HIS PARTNER'S MELODIES.

But he never lost his sense of humor. He retained throughout those days of failure what he now calls "a certain inner conceit." The theater crowd still remembers Hammerstein's full-page greeting in Variety the first Christmas after "Oklahoma!" Under the heading "Holiday Greetings," he listed five of what he calls his "spectacular failures" and added: "I've done it before and I can do it again."

Hammerstein disagrees with those who say he was just being modest.

"That was not modesty," he says. "It was a veiled rebuke to those who were declaring me a genius because I had a hit."

DURING his long years of failure, Hammerstein says, he did not get depressed because he was "conditioned" to a flop.

"In my early days when I came up fast, I had some failures. They kept me in balance. In this business one is always on the threshold of a big success or a big flop. I am prepared for a failure."

Wife Dorothy recalls the night Hammerstein's musical comedy "East of Eden" opened on Broadway. It was the fall of 1931, and they waited up for the newspapers. The reviews were not very kind.

"As dreary a libretto as ever dejected a musical play," said one critic.

The next morning, Dorothy called into the next room to inquire what her husband was doing. He announced he was at work on a new show. It became "Music in the Air" with Jerome Kern and ran on Broadway for 342 performances—a solid hit.

Hammerstein is temperamental about his lyrics because he considers a man's lyrics a reflection of his attitude toward life. He feels that if his own lyrics display a certain simplicity and wholesomeness, it is largely because he tries to live a simple and wholesome life. His whole philosophy of lyric writing stems from that one word—simplicity.

For years, he has been bothered by one of his own creations—"When I Grow Too Old to Dream," written to Sigmund Romberg's waltz tune. He says the words really don't make sense, for when does a person grow too old to dream—especially someone as cheerful as Oscar Hammerstein?

For Hammerstein writing doesn't come easy. He insists he has a very small vocabulary. He admits that he reverts to rhyming dictionary, but only occasionally and as a last resort.

Most of the Hammerstein lyrics are composed by what he calls the "perambulatory" method. He walks up and down in search of the right word, the proper phrase. Then he moves to a "stand-up" desk, writing and rewriting with soft lead pencils.

So he wouldn't have to tramp up and down the country roads near their Doylestown (Pa.) farm, Dorothy Hammerstein last year made him a twenty-fifth wedding anniversary present of a balcony opening off his study. Now he does his country pacing around the porch.

Red, White And Blue Grapes

By Edith M. Barber

WHETHER Columbus was the actual discoverer of America or not, he deserves tribute for opening up a new world. Although he was personally disappointed in his search for the gold and spices of India, both sides of the world have since profited.

Many new foods were introduced to Europe, and perhaps even more important were the contributions made in return to this continent. We should give special thanks to the monastic orders whose members followed explorers as they pushed ever westward. They taught other important things besides religion, and every monastery was also an experiment center for agriculture.

THE INTRODUCTION of European grapes has grown in importance through the years, and today California supplies us for many months with huge quantities of raisins and fresh grapes. The red, white and blue of fall fruits flaunt our national colors.

From our own native grapes of the silk-skin type an industry has developed in the east. Concord supplies the always popular grape juice. More delicate in flavor are other red and white varieties. These are in market for just a short time each fall. During other months we depend on western grapes.

MOLDED GRAPE SALAD.

One envelope unflavored gelatin; one-fourth cup cold water; one cup boiling water; one third cup granulated sugar; dash salt; one six-ounce can frozen grape-juice concentrate; three tablespoons fresh, frozen or canned lemon juice; one cup halved seedless grapes; salad greens.

Soften gelatin in cold water. Dissolve with boiling water. Stir in sugar and salt. Add fruit juices. Chill until mixture thickens. Fold in the halved grapes. Chill until set. Unmold and serve with salad greens. Garnish with mayonnaise. Yield: six servings.

GRAPES WITH SOUR CREAM.

Blend one cup sour cream with one-fourth cup brown sugar. Stir until thoroughly blended. Chill until ready to serve. Mix with about one and one-half pounds stemmed seedless grapes. Yield: six servings.

Another method of application is to buy the caulking compound in a large tube—like a big toothpaste tube. With the tube you get a key to roll up the end of the tube so that the compound can be forced out through the nozzle. This is pretty convenient for the average person who has just a little caulking to be done.

SAN FRANCISCO.
THE aspen are turning gold in the high Sierra now. The creeks of the Mother Lode are down to a trickle, awaiting the winter rains. In the crisp, frosty mornings you can hear the flat crack of a deer rifle. And there is a welcome blaze in the fireplace when the sun drops into the valley and the evening chill comes down from the mountains.

STAN DELAPLANE

There was a time when this country was full of gold miners. But today the roofs of the Wells Fargo buildings are caved in and the iron doors are rusty on their hinges.

"On the third of September, 1850, after traveling overland all summer, driving an ox team, I arrived at Weberville, a gold mining town 50 miles northeast of Sacramento City, Calif." So my grandfather wrote in his diary.

"I was out of money and provisions and 2500 miles away from home. I had a pick, a shovel, a frying pan, three blankets and a rifle. There was plenty to eat in Weberville, such as potatoes, beans, salt pork, fish, flour and fresh beef, as fat, as yellow and rich-looking as a lump of gold."

"But potatoes and flour were 15 cents a pound, and beef and pork and beans 25 cents. And if any of these eatables had been a cent a pound I would have been obliged to scent them. For I had nary a cent to buy a pound of beef."

THE OTHER MORNING I drove over to where Weberville once stood with three stores, a church and 9000 people. If you push through a little clump of willows, you can still find part of the brick foundations. I suppose of one of the stores.

That is all there is left of Weberville. The Mother Lode towns boomed and fell. All in a space of 10 to 20 years. Nothing much left but the names: Squabbletown, Chinese Diggings, Second Garrote, French Flat, Murderer's Gulch, Roaring Camp.

The small towns that remained changed their names and made sober efforts to become thriving centers. The town of Bedbug became Ione, and Pokerville is now Plymouth. But the gold was washed out of the hills. And the tourists have yet to discover this rare and beautiful part of the nation.

THE HOTEL ST. GEORGE stands three balconied stories high on what was the main street of Volcano. Honeysuckle and Virginia creeper climb posts that were put up in 1862. On the foundations of earlier hotels.

The windows overlook hillsides of waxy green manzanita and tall dark Jeffrey pines. The stone walls of the first brewery in California, the Wells Fargo office and two or three saloons are falling into their own cellars. And the deer come down into the street at night.

The St. George has not been modernized or worked over too much. But it is a comfortable place. Specializing in a hearty rum-brandy-milk punch called "Moose Milk." And a small morning pancake called a nugget that is spread with hot melted honey butter.

It is a quiet town of easy wind in the pine trees and cane rockers in front of the hotel. The air is bracing and smells of pine needles soaking up the day's sun.

NEAR HERE, my grandfather wrote, "we discovered a rich claim that paid us $16 to $20 a day. When we had our cabin battened with boards, a fireplace and chimney built, two bunks made and filled with pine leaves, a board table and five stools, shutter for our door, the dirt floor leveled up, enough provisions to last us four or five months, rich diggings, warm days and pleasant nights and no fear of Indians or thieves, I think I was the happiest man in California."

"I could sleep as sound as a dollar and eat three square meals a day."

"I occasionally amused myself by climbing a tall pine tree and with a large field glass taking a magnificent view of the Sacramento valley, and I could plainly see smoke and steam from the steamboats on the Sacramento river 60 miles away. The great lonely spreading oaks on the Cosumnes river, 30 miles away."

"Then I turned my field glass to the east, and such a sight as I saw, 30, 40, 50 and even 100 miles away, all the pine trees and the mountains were covered with a great white sheet of snow. This was the grandest sight of my life."

It looks exactly like that today.

Tips for Teens

By Elinor Williams

DO you know a boy who seems to like you, but is too shy to speak to you? Or a girl who don't quite dare to say "Hello!" to? Shyness that keeps you from making friends and having fun is a real problem. A girl writes:

"About four years ago, a boy my age moved near my house. I never really noticed him until about six months ago. Now I am in love with him and he seems to like me, but we don't speak to each other. I've been waiting for him to speak first, but he is very bashful. I don't want to talk to him first because he'll think I'm a flirt."

ANSWER—It's good manners for a girl to speak first, so perhaps he is waiting for you to say "Hello!"—especially if he's shy.

So next time you see him, add a "Hi!" to your smile. Do it in a casual, friendly way and he'll have no reason to think you're flirting. After you have said "Hello!" a few times, you can think of something else to say to him, preferably a question that he can reply to... about something that interests him, if possible, such as, "How was your tennis game today?"

Later, perhaps he'll come up with a date suggestion. If not, it's OK for you to invite him to your home (with or without another couple) to listen to records, watch TV, play bridge, make fudge, to a girls' dance or party or get a friend (someone he knows) to arrange a double date including you and him.

FORGET BEING "in love with him," however, because you don't really know him yet. Think of him as a friend, and your friendship and dates with him are more likely to materialize. Boys often don't appreciate "love" that comes too easily and too quickly. Love usually grows gradually as two people know each other more.

'Eat, Think and Be Slender'
Don't Hide in a Fortress of Fat

Insecurity Is One of Most Frequent Reasons for Being Obese, Doctor Points Out

By Leonid Kotkin, M.D.

Second article in a series from the book, "Eat, Think and Be Slender." The author is a practicing physician in New York City, specializing in the problems of obesity.

MANY people are insecure and feel unable to cope with the onslaughts of a "cruel and demanding world."

A great percentage of these insecure people are obese. While there are many reasons—unconscious ones—for attaining a large girth, one of the most frequently found is insecurity.

Who is to determine whether you are going to be secure or insecure? You yourself.

And, if you allow yourself the doubtful attribute of insecurity, you may well become one of the obese. One of the easiest ways of shirking the responsibilities of living is by hiding. And one of the most common ways of hiding—going into seclusion on a desert island—is by building a fortress of armor and climbing into it.

This suit of armor acts as a fortress to protect the insecure and the hypersensitive. It is a fortress of fat. There is little doubt that the person who becomes grossly obese is really building a fort around himself wherein he will feel safer as he goes about his daily life.

A lecturer in history at an eastern university, after "running away" within herself by building the protective coat of fatness, finally ran away physically and came to New York to start anew.

This young woman comes from a well-established family. She had acquired a great deal of respect among her colleagues as a teacher. Had you met her when she first came to New York, you would have classified her immediately as a good-natured fat girl. She was always jolly, always laughing. She was everyone's "pal" and would have gladly given the dress off her back to help any of her friends.

She was so well insulated by fat that none of her friends—or her family for that matter—knew her. Her fortress was impregnable. All anyone knew of her was the surface, which, aside from a potentially pretty face, actually was quite unattractive.

Within this "castle" lived a beautiful princess and she, as in tales of old, was waiting for her Prince Charming to come to rescue her. Her dream prince undoubtedly was much like her favorite Hollywood star, though she was intelligent enough to have disdained such an idea consciously.

After lengthy discussions, she admitted, "I see where I really was running away from the real world with its many demands, its disappointments and its discipline. I must have been living in a dream world—though I didn't realize it."

Well, the Ugly Duckling legend won't come true other than in a dream world. A kiss from Prince Charming won't awaken the sleeping princess. Yet the beautiful lady can be released from her imprisonment in the tower of obesity, and this one was. She followed treatment carefully and lost 43 pounds in five months.

Many authorities feel that the only way to get obese persons on the path to successful weight-loss is to throw a scare into them. I disagree. Fear may be an obstacle in the attainment of a proper weight control program.

THE GOOD-NATURED FAT PERSON, IN REALITY, IS OFTEN AN INSECURE PERSON WHO BUILDS A VIRTUAL FORTRESS OF FAT AND CLIMBS INTO IT IN AN EFFORT TO FEEL SAFER IN FACING DAILY LIFE.

That is not to say that an understanding of the dangers of obesity should be withheld from the patient. It is my belief that the overweight patient should be aided in reaching a mature approach to these very dangers. With this understanding, the patient then will find such knowledge an added inducement in a diet regime.

There is no doubt as to the dangers of obesity. So well are they known, in fact, that obesity has been labeled "America's Public Health Enemy No. 1." Insurance company statistics show specifically that the obese do not live as long as they should. On the other hand, the slightly underweight live the longest.

IN any illness, the death rate is higher for the obese than for the normal individual. Arteriosclerosis, high blood pressure, diabetes, liver disease, heart disease and kidney disease are more prevalent and more serious in overweight individuals.

The obese are poor surgical risks. Arthritic and orthopedic deformities are worsened by obesity. That is an imposing list of "dangers" with which to contend. In fact, it has been estimated that if all the close to 30,000,000 Americans who are obese were cured, the benefits to the general good health of the country and the longevity of the nation would be more significant than if both cancer and tuberculosis were conquered.

With these facts explained in a mature manner you will find yourself more willing to undergo the task of losing weight.

Suggested Menu

Dr. Kotkin's suggested menu for tomorrow:

Lunch: Tomato juice, broiled white fish, steamed chard, spinach, tomato quarters, skim milk.

Dinner: Shrimp cocktail, steak, broiled mushrooms, string beans, salad lettuce, endive, romaine, tomato-juice dressing, coffee.

*Section one small orange and one small grapefruit. Use half the orange sections and one-quarter the grapefruit sections. Garnish with finely chopped mint leaves.

If you want to serve a snack for guests, try Lamb Kabobs. Combine three-quarters cup vinegar, same amount of water, two bay leaves, teaspoon salt, quarter teaspoon liquid Sucaryl, bring to a boil in saucepan; simmer five minutes; cool. Cut into inch cubes pound and a half uncooked lamb leg, finely chop large onion; arrange in layers in a large bowl and sprinkle with mashed clove of garlic and quarter teaspoon of pepper. Add vinegar mixture; marinate 24 hours. Drain, save marinade. Arrange cubes on skewers, broil 15 minutes in shallow pan, turning often and basting with marinade. (Serves six.)

You may not eat sugars, fats or starches.

With these facts merely tossed at you in an effort to frighten

This came as rude shock. Not too many years before he had been in the Army and had been classified as 1A.

"What I can't figure out is how I deteriorated from 1A to a virtual 4F in six years," he told me during his first visit.

"When I got over the initial shock, I began to look into this business of being overweight. I need insurance because I now have a family on the way and the insurance company doctor told me that unless I lost weight, so that my blood pressure would go down also, I didn't have a chance of getting a policy."

"What I read about obesity scared the heck out of me. Do you know how dangerous it is to be overweight?" he asked.

SYMPATHETICALLY nodded and started on the preliminary road to helping this ex-G.I. At the time he took the insurance company's physical, he was 85 pounds overweight. Feeling that his "days were numbered" once he realized the dangers of this condition, he made attempts to diet.

"The more I tried to diet, the more I wanted to eat," he said. "I couldn't resist going to the refrigerator every night before bed—sometimes late in the middle of the night when I awakened with a ravenous hunger—and making myself a 'dagwood' sandwich. And I had eaten three square meals during the day, too."

"I guess you know what happened, don't you? I gained 12 more pounds in the next eight weeks."

It was apparent that he had developed a severe anxiety state. The first thing necessary to do was to point out that his struggle with obesity was not a futile one, that irreparable damage had not been done to his health, that much could be accomplished and that he would not only get an insurance policy, but live out his allotted years in good health.

With the easing of his emotional problem, he was put on a rigid diet, given vitamin supplements and hunger-curing medication. He did extremely well. In five months, he lost 72 pounds. He became a good weight-watcher. Once, when he regained eight pounds slowly some six months later, he worked it off along with an additional four pounds.

Since that time he has held his weight well. He is quite conscious of his weight and claims that the amount of restraint he needs now to keep it at a normal level is "not too painful" to achieve.

Conquering the fear of fat is an essential in weight reduction.

Contract Bridge
By Ely Culbertson

THE remarkable hand below proved two points; that a little knowledge is not only a dangerous thing, but a highly irritating thing to one's bridge partner; and that even an expert can't play a hand when he's in a towering rage.

Hand 1098

♠	AQ107	♥	853
♦	9852	♣	AK1098
♠	Q3	♥	AK1098
♦	Q3	♣	AK1098

East-West were high-ranking masters, opposed to a weakish player in the North position and another master in the South. As often happens under such conditions, the better pair took liberties in the bidding—as follows:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1♣	Pass	1♠
Pass	2♣	Pass	2♥
Pass	3♣	Pass	3♥
Pass	4♣	Pass	4♥

It goes without saying that West put his neck out in no uncertain fashion when he doubled one spade for a takeout, even after passing originally. He found East with such a horrible holding that East passed the double as the least of evils, willing to let the enemy make the contract and perhaps a few overtricks, rather than get into a vulnerable catastrophe of his own. Of course, East would not have stood for South's redouble—that would have been getting into the too-expensive range—but, to South's fury and disgust, East didn't have to "bail out" with two clubs—North rescued him!

Obviously, North felt that his partner's redouble called for a rescue—not of the opponents, but of South himself—but this was a ridiculous thought. If South wanted to get out of a one-spade contract he could bid one no-trump or any other suit. North should have been delighted with a one-spade redoubled contract.

To repeat, South was so furious that he made a hash of the play. West led a low diamond. South put up the ace, discarded two hearts on the high clubs, and then passed the jack of trumps. West won and led another diamond. East ruffed and returned a heart; and now East could and did overruff dummy on the next diamond lead. . . . Quite a fiasco.

Words, Wit And Wisdom

By William Morris

A Not-Too-Good Idiom

FROM San Diego, Calif., comes a letter from former State Assemblyman Paul Richie, calling attention to a widely used but, on analysis, meaningless idiom: "As one who loves the English language," he writes, "I become indignant—almost angry—to find the meaning of a word being changed by usage without a good reason."

"Less than a year ago I began listening and watching for the word 'too' coupled with the negative. Here is an example: 'His health is not too good.'"

"OBVIOUSLY, nobody's health can be 'too' good, because good health is always desirable—perfect health, if possible."

"To correct myself here and to be strictly accurate, it is not really the meaning of 'too' that changes, but certainly the use of the word (is improper) in such backhanded statements."

"When first met with, the usage might seem humorous. One could smile at the whimsicality of it; but now one meets it constantly. It disgusts me. How long has it been going on?"

WELL, SIR, I'm afraid it has been going on for a long, long time. Indeed, this formulation ranks among that group which the late, great H. W. Fowler labeled the "sturdy indefensibles." It is one of those idioms which, as Fowler noted, "are seen, if they are tested by grammar or logic, to express badly, even sometimes to express the reverse of, what they are nevertheless well understood to mean. . . . It is well to realize that there are such things as foolish idioms; that a language should abound in them can be no credit to it or its users—and the drawing of attention to them is a step towards making them obsolete."

Let's Explore Your Mind

By Dr. Albert E. Wiggam

1. WHEN YOUNG PEOPLE ARE CONSIDERING MARRIAGE, DO THEY KNOW WHAT TO CONSIDER? YOUR OPINION.

Answer to Question 1. ABOUT as much as if they were considering the Einstein theory without a knowledge of higher mathematics. They think they know the facts of life, but they don't know the facts of love, rearing children or budgeting. Acquiring a knowledge of these facts requires careful study, tolerance, self-control, and technical training in getting along with people.

Answer to Question 2. True. One-third do not have good diets—because of poor eating habits, not from lack of food, according to Dr. Austin E. Hill. Many parents who don't look crazy let their children go to school without breakfast. Studies show youngsters up to nine have better diets than those from 10 to 15. Adolescent girls are the worst offenders.

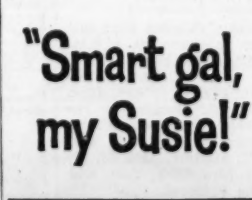

These finicky girls will no doubt teach their children poor eating habits," says Dr. Hill.

Answer to Question 3. Yes. There would still be horse races; and some men would still prefer brunettes, and others, blondes or redheads. If everyone had complete knowledge of everything and had perfectly logical faculties, they might all bet on the same horse and leave either the blondes or brunettes on the shelf. Human beings are so different by both heredity and environment, they reach different conclusions when viewing the same evidence, though all think they are logical.

Artists' Studio Tour Scheduled Nov. 5 and 6

By Margaret Allen Ruhl

A DOZEN or more St. Louis artists are preparing the 1955 tour of their studios Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 5 and 6, from noon to 5:30 o'clock. Proceeds will go to the Artists' Guild, 812 Union boulevard, for such projects as cash awards for those exhibiting there and to defray the cost of the newly refurbished front gallery and the new roof.

In many of the studios the artists will demonstrate their talents in either painting, sculpture or the making of ceramics and crafts.

First stop on the ticket is the guild, where Laura Poeppel, Walter Pershall, Arthur Kanak and Florence Hoefer Brenner will for the first time demonstrate painting along with James B. Fisher Jr., Thelma Notter Webb, Eloise Mikkelsen and Philip and Mary Gronemeyer, who have contributed to other tours. Elizabeth Phelan will be there for sculpture; Bill Sims for caricatures and James Harmon for enamels.

Studios to be shown for the first time are those of Mattin, painter, 65 Frederick Lane, Glendale; Jessie B. Rickley, painter, 471 Foote avenue, Webster Groves; Julie Robinson and Natalie Sheets, crafts, 7211 Oakland avenue, Richmond Heights; Albert Aloe, painter, 19 Dartford avenue; Bob Solomon, prints, 7186 Delmar boulevard; Virginia Moberly Schlueter, portraits, 8103 Madison avenue, and Warren Spaulding, painter, 6806 Pershing avenue, all in University City; Almee Schweig, painter, 5314 Waterman avenue, and Pat Degener and Noel Waite, potters, 3657 Grand Square.

Other studios to be seen are those of Fred and Mildred Carpenter, painters and portrait artists, 416 Woodlawn avenue, Webster Groves; Ada Hanvey, painter, 7538 Wydown boulevard, Clayton; Florence French Holm, ceramics, Bixby Hall, Washington University; Alexandra Korsakoff Galston, painting, enameling and jewelry making, 387 North Taylor avenue; Charles F. The Musee, a scholarship benefit held annually by the Vassar and Bryn Mawr Clubs of St. Louis, will be held this year from Friday, Nov. 25, through Saturday, Dec. 3, at the Park Plaza Hotel. On display will be gifts selected from more than 100 stores in this area.

The children's contest closes Saturday, Nov. 19, and ornaments may be delivered any time during the preceding three weeks to Mrs. Henry F. Devens, 9035 Ladue road; Mrs. Clifford Greve, 13 Westmoreland place, or Mrs. Charlton MacVeagh, 425 Oakwood avenue, Webster Groves. The entries may be made of any material and be any size appropriate for decorating a Christmas tree. Attached to each must be a tag marked with the child's name, address, telephone number, school and grade.

Charles Nagel, director of the City Art Museum, is to judge the contest. Winners will be announced Wednesday, Nov. 23, and prize-winning ornaments will be displayed on the Christmas tree at the Musee de Noel. After the Musee closes the ornaments will be distributed to hospitals and children's homes.

My Day

Housewife Is a Skilled Profession

By Eleanor Roosevelt
NEW YORK.

RECENTLY I received a letter which raised a question of interest to many women. It reads as follows:

"Reading your article in the August Safeway magazine gives me the inspiration and opportunity I have long been looking for, namely to 'speak' to you regarding the word 'housewife,' used to define the greatest profession we women perform."

"Question: What is your occupation? Answer: Housewife, wife of a house. Questioning a child: What does your father do? Answer: He is a lawyer on Wall Street. Question: What is your mother's occupation? Answer: Oh, she is just a housewife."

"I have heard this on TV. I am sure other women have cringed at the term. The dictionary defines the word as 'the woman in charge of a household.' Wife is defined as 'a woman joined in marriage to a man as husband.'"

"Surely there is another name for us. How do you feel about it? Why not write an article which will bring opinions from other married women?"

I MUST CONFESS that in days gone by I have often entered myself on questionnaires as "housewife," without feeling the slightest embarrassment. Now I put down "writer" or "lecturer," because the major part of my life is taken up in trying to make plans for running a home and watching over the daily needs of a household and children plus guests, as it used to be in earlier days.

I am not sure, however, that I did not feel more useful when I had to be home the greater part of the time. I had to make very careful plans when I left home so that all would go on in the same way while I was gone. I was limited in my free time. One could never be sure that there would not be sudden illness which would make a change in plans inevitable, or that home tasks would not clash with some demands outside my family—and of course, the demands outside the family were always secondary.

THOSE WERE the days when on a questionnaire I would put down "housewife" and feel very proud of it, and I am quite sure that no woman has any reason for feeling humiliated by the title. It is one of the most skilled professions in the world. When one adds to the business of running a house the care and bringing up of children, there is so much needed preparation for this occupation that I think it could be classed today among the most skilled occupations in the world.

To be sure, there are good and bad homes; and there are children who are well brought up and children who are badly brought up. This happens in any business or professional activity. But when one adds up what it means to a nation, one must concede that the well run home and the well brought up children are more important even than a well run business.

More people are affected by the occupation of a housewife and mother than are ever touched by any single business, no matter how large it may be.

Martha Carr's

Dear Martha:

LIVE in a flat which is owned by my mother-in-law. We pay our rent just as all her other tenants do which is no more than right. I am very fond of her but there is one thing she does which I don't like. She has a key to my house and I have found out that on several occasions while I was not at home, she came in. I don't think she has any right to do this. Please give me your opinion.

GRACE.

I agree with you. Unless there is some emergency, or if it is necessary to open the door for a repairman or delivery man, she should respect your home just as she does the quarters of other tenants. However, whether you can do anything about it without stirring up trouble, I don't know. You know whether you can discuss matters like this with your husband. If so, talk it over frankly. Tell him you are glad to have her come in, but you worry a little for fear the door might accidentally be left open when she leaves. Let him approach her on the subject if she wishes. Otherwise, you may have to try dropping a few hints. You know, of course, that you can trust her in your home, so if a complaint is apt to cause trouble in the family, I doubt if it would be worth it.

Dear Martha:

A FRIEND OF MINE asked me to be her maid of honor and her only attendant in a small wedding ceremony. She said I could wear a certain dress which I bought recently. Now, however, she has changed her mind and wants to have a larger wedding and tells me I will have to buy a dress which she has selected. I don't have much money and it would really mean a sacrifice for me. What can I do?

PAT.

The bride does have the right to decide what her attendants should wear, and they buy their own costumes, but if she is a thoughtful person she will make sure that her wedding will not entail a financial burden for her friends. If you feel you can't afford the dress, by all means say so and withdraw from the wedding party. That would be far better than paying more than you can afford, then feeling resentful about it.

IN ANSWER TO Blanche: In addressing wedding invitations, write only the last name, with no Christian name or initials, on the inside envelope. If the outside envelope is addressed to Mr. and Mrs. John Richard Doe, the inside envelope is addressed simply to Mr. and Mrs. Doe.

How to Impress Him

By Ruth Millett

ANY woman who sets out to help her husband earn a living ought to get one fact through her head right at the start. Her husband will never be as proud of her ability to earn a pay check as he will be of any more feminine accomplishment.

The pay check will come in handy, all right. And from time to time he may admit it.

But there is no mystery to a man connected with a pay check. "So she works. So she gets paid for it."

But let the same woman whip up a dress with her own two hands, or serve guests a meal they rave about, or create a charming room without the aid of a decorator or win a reputation as an expert on raising flowers, and her husband is all awed admiration.

That is a distinction a lot of working wives don't grasp. They are often unhappy because they feel their husbands don't appreciate their ability to help out as a breadwinner.

IN ORDER TO UNDERSTAND the man's natural reaction all a woman has to do is test her own feelings about her husband's accomplishments.

Is she honestly as proud of his ability to broil a steak or stir up a tasty barbecue sauce as she is of his ability to paint the house, build a cabinet for the dining room, or take a balky power mower apart and put it back together again in good working order?

Of course, she's not. She knows that so far as cooking goes she is the real professional in the family, just as a man knows that earning a living is really his responsibility. So neither is much impressed with the other's entering their own field of endeavor.

But when a man takes a piece of machinery apart or a woman makes herself a dress each is impressed with the other's ability.

All of which is by way of saying that the way for a woman to impress a man is with purely feminine abilities and the way for a man to impress a woman is by masculine abilities.

A woman who sets out to earn a pay check doesn't impress a man much more than a man impresses a woman by donning an apron and invading the kitchen.

Beauty After 40

By Edyth Thornton McLeod

YOU should never look back, except in your mirror. I see so many women, and I must admit that most of them are in the after 40 group, who are careless about their Rear View. Too often there are wisps of hair hanging down from an upswipe or a frazzled, curly effect, which looks as if a brush and comb have never touched the back hair. Often zippers are open a half inch or so, and bead necklaces are frayed or caught with a broken clasp. And horror upon horror—often there are fat bulges on each side just above the waistline, which indicate the wrong corset and the wrong bra.

You can get a smooth neckline and waistline, even if you are overweight—and you know that you can do something about that, too. The mature woman—in fact, any woman—should watch her grooming for every detail for neatness and perfection.

When you meet people face to face you can smile and put on your best manner, and so you make a pleasing effect, but from the back there you are! There is no saving grace except good grooming, the perfection of your hairline, neckline, waistline and hemline.

Be sure that you apply makeup on the back of the neck and behind the ears, and that your earrings are clean and that screw-backs are in good repair. Veils should be neatly clipped at the ends, or if caught with a velvet ribbon the ribbon must be fresh and the veiling always crisp.

I advise you not to look backward in your life and time, but do, I beg of you, look backward in your mirror before you meet your public going and coming!

Just Money Isn't Security to Coca

She Explains Why She Tore Up $1,000,000 Contract to Get Back to Work

By Phyllis Battelle

NEW YORK, Oct. 17 (INS).—IMOGENE COCA, with her sad urchin's face that can light up brighter than all Times Square, has always been the enigma of show business wise-guys. No ham in her, this kid. No respect for the better things, like money and parties.

"And now," she said, sitting hunched and small in the corner of a midtown rehearsal hall, "they think I'm crazy, lots of them, and it doesn't seem to make much sense. But there are things a lot of people don't consider."

And with that, Coca explained quietly and patiently why she tore up her $1,000,000, 10-year contract with NBC and its comforting guarantee of security—with nine more years to go.

"Security," she said, "is something I never really got till I got on television (in 1949) and I have a great respect for it, and for money, too. I have figured out that in my case, well," she screwed up her eyes in concentration, "the money part doesn't mean security. It's what you're doing, and I want to be doing many things."

She was temporarily without a show at NBC, and with none in prospect. This, she said, frightened her. So now she is headed for Las Vegas, where she will open Nov. 1 with her own personally-financed variety show.

"You would probably think I was crazy, too," Imogene continued, wistfully, "if you knew how little money I had saved. It was an expensive world last year."

Did their passing influence her decision to break from her well-paid ennui and get back to work?

IMOGENE COCA... "I'M TOLD YOU'RE SUPPOSED TO LIE ABOUT HOW MUCH YOU MAKE AT LAS VEGAS. BUT I AM NOT MAKING $500,000 AND THAT'S THAT."

"Well, that's possible," she concentrated her attention on her clasped hands. "That's quite possible. I guess you could say I'm beginning again, a sort of new life. There's nothing to keep me always in New York now."

Except, of course — Coca brightened — the monstrous French poodle, "Attila," and the two destructive cats, and the red squirrel somebody gave her. She will leave them in the apartment she rented on Central Park West while she investigates her new life on the stage.

Actually, it's an old life revived for the comedienne. She began her career on the stage, and has played sophisticated supper clubs for years. "I have had salt cellars tossed at me often." But she doesn't think that could conceivably happen in Las Vegas.

"Out there, they go to the clubs to see a show, and they concentrate on it, they don't get drunk like at some night spots," she says. "I don't expect to be interrupting people's emotional state, which is what leads to the throwing of salt cellars."

COCA and company (three dancers, a pianist-conductor, two dressers) will receive $70,000 for a three-weeks stint. "I'm told you're supposed to lie about how much you make at Las Vegas," she says seriously. "but I am not making $500,000 and that's that."

This "that's that" attitude of honesty reminded me of what her late husband, Bob, told me a year ago. "To Coca," he said, "money is wampum. Nice to have, but what does it buy?"

She's proving him right. "Maybe I'm the goon girl of all time," she said, "but I think my days of sleeping on park benches are over. I feel if I devote enough time and effort to whatever it is I do, I'll get along all right."

Suddenly she looked up and grinned. "My Lord, I hope I don't sound like Little Orphan Annie..."

a wholeness, a turning toward something.

May each loving adolescent, says Simone Weil, as he studies, come nearer to the moment when, like a watchful servant, he will hear his master's knock on the door, and will arise and open to him.

The Dean Speaks Up

Connection Between Study and Prayer

By Adele Starbird

A TRAINER never gives a command until he is sure that he has the dog's full attention. It is useless to give orders when a dog is looking off into the distance; something else has captured its attention.

Every teacher knows that attention is the secret of learning. Once the student really gives his attention to a subject, the battle is won. We say sometimes that a student hasn't learned to concentrate; we mean that he can't focus his attention. Interest and motivation are bound up with attention. How to motivate the student, how to arouse his interest, how to teach him to set the camera of his mind so that it comes into immediate sharp focus whenever he wishes—that is both the problem and the goal of education.

We have always known that perfect attention is also the key to prayer. The Mayor of Florence, La Pira, says that it is difficult to pray. And it really is hard work at the beginning, because first one must bring all wandering fancies and random thoughts under control, centering the full attention upon God; and the last person is tempted to postpone the effort. To the woman who complained that her mind wandered during prayer, St. Francis de Sales wrote that if she spent the entire hour of her prayer doing nothing more than bringing her attention back very gently to God each time that it strayed off, her hour was well spent.

SO FAR AS I KNOW, it never occurred to anyone to make a connection between study and prayer until Simone Weil did so in her book "Waiting for God" (G. P. Putnam's Sons).

She whom Andre Gide called "the most truly spiritual writer of this century" had been trained in the most rigorous intellectual disciplines. Therefore there is nothing vague or loose about her chapter on School Studies.

The student who prepares difficult lessons well, whether Latin or mathematics, is purifying himself. "Something in our soul has a far more violent repugnance for true attention than the flesh has for bodily fatigue. This something is much more closely connected with evil than the flesh. That is why every time that we really concentrate our attention, we destroy the evil in ourselves."

Every problem in geometry is a fragment of that Truth which once in a human voice declared, "I am the Truth." Thought of in this way, every school exercise is like a sacrament. It builds up both intellectual and spiritual power, and makes prayer possible.

IT IS NOT NECESSARY to be very bright; it is necessary only to be wholly attentive. Simone Weil believes that the strange psychic powers of the famous Cure d'Ars were the result of his long years of persistent application in the seminary where he had to take Latin over and over. This man who was considered hopeless by his teachers, later developed such power that the railroads were forced to run special trains to his miserable village—that is a matter of record.

Will power has very little place in study. It is a matter of watching, waiting, listening, looking. While attention is perhaps the greatest of all efforts, it should be without strain. It is really a form of humility, a complete negation of the ego.

International Pattern

MILIO PUCCI'S background reads a little like an international Horatio Alger, achieving success in every line of endeavor. Along with everything else he has done, his success in the fashion field is not to be disputed for he has combined his native Italian sensitivity with a well grounded knowledge of American tastes and preferences, acquired during his collegiate training in this country. Handsome enough for a movie career, he has been and is completely aware of what makes women attractive: i.e., understated chic. This dress is a case in point. Devising simply, it has some very refined bodice seaming, a flattering two-gore flare skirt and a distinctively European use of detail. Signor Pucci likes it in faille, shantung, wool crepe, linen or novelty cotton, suggests you use velveteen, satin, faille or novelty fabric for the contrasting appliqued bands on the neck and hip lines.

This pattern is cut to Designer Measurements, not Standard Pattern Measurements.

IS YOUR HAIR BEING CHOKED TO DEATH AT THESE 3 POINTS?

Yes, hair actually is choked to death by a keratin deposit which builds up inside the hair follicle. The follicle (tube through which hair grows) becomes smaller and smaller inside and before long the growing hair is choked for lack of growing space. The critical areas are: (1) frontal point; (2) crown and (3) temples. In order to keep your scalp in good condition you must take steps to dissolve and remove this keratin debris.

Latest research, supervised by dermatologists, involving more than two hundred test cases, resulted in a startling new technique of dissolving the keratin debris—now exclusively a part of the professional Thomas scalp treatment.

Through this new technique, in addition to the other stimulative and therapeutic adjuncts in Thomas treatment, Thomas can help you to get rid of dandruff and scalp itch, and promote an active scalp—faster and better than ever before. Seven million Thomas treatments have been given—35 years of success backs each Thomas treatment. Come in today for a free scalp examination—see for yourself how Thomas can help you, too, to have a healthy scalp and well-groomed hair.

My Neighbor Says:

Don't wipe the excess liquid off a varnish brush by wiping on the edge of the container. The dried particles of varnish will fall into the fresh varnish and produce a rough finish. Best idea is to stretch a piece of wire across the top of the container and wipe your brush on this.

Canvas awnings should be taken down at the end of the season and hung in a cool dry place. Too much heat or too much moisture is not good for the material.

Brown Sugar Drop Cookies
Ingredients: one and one-half cups sifted flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon nutmeg, one-half cup shortening, one cup dark brown sugar (firmly packed), one egg, one cup shredded coconut (cut in short lengths), one package (six ounces) semi-sweet chocolate pieces.

Method: Sift together the flour, baking powder, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg. Cream shortening and brown sugar; beat in egg vigorously. Stir in sifted dry ingredients until blended. Stir in coconut and chocolate pieces. Drop, a few inches apart, on ungreased baking sheet. Bake in moderate (375 degrees) oven until lightly browned—10 to 12 minutes. Makes about 36 cookies.

Light Frost Likely Tomorrow

Cool, cloudy and threatening weather in the St. Louis area is expected to continue through tomorrow with a likelihood of scattered light frost in the morning. Meteorologist Harry F. Wahlgren said temperatures will be somewhat higher Wednesday with a chance of showers. Wahlgren predicted temperatures tomorrow ranging from a morning low of about 40 to an afternoon high of near 60. The mercury dropped below freezing in scattered areas of the state yesterday, but minimums varied early today from 37 at West Plains to 47 in St. Louis. Readings were in the 20s this morning in parts of Minnesota, the Dakotas, Nebraska and Colorado, where the nation's low of 16 was recorded at Fraser. Temperatures were in the 90s again yesterday in southern Nevada, Arizona, southern Texas and parts of California. Maximums in the nation yesterday

REDHEAD from TEXAS

CHAPTER TWO.

MOLLY'S heartbeat quickened as she entered the cool portals of El Rancho. The house had been decorated in the green and grays which seemed to belong to the open plains of the West. Wide windows and glass walls were part of every room which brought H.J.'s beloved Texas into view no matter where he sat, ate, worked or slept.

Over the fireplace in the drawing room was a life-sized portrait in oils of Molly's mother. A gentle, beautiful girl with long dark hair and smiling dark eyes. Molly had inherited little but her name from this mother who died when she was only 3. Molly's red hair and fighting spirit had come from H.J.

Matt carried in the bags. "Your father's not here, Miss Braden. He went to Dallas on business. He took the plane."

Much as Molly disliked the good looking young man who was the new manager, she had to know the truth. "Then H.J. is angry, isn't he?" she asked frankly. "Did someone tell him about my plans?"

Matt grinned. "If you mean does he know about your engagement to Walter Symington—yes. Several people wrote him about it. He gazed at her curiously. 'H.J. was burned and I don't blame him. Why would you want to marry a New York stock broker and live in a penthouse all your life?' He glanced out the open window. 'Especially when you have all this...'

"I happen to love Walter—not that it's any of your business." "It's my business, baby. If it affects H.J. I think your dad is one of the finest men I've ever known and I intend to do everything I can to see that he gets a square deal."

HER cheeks flamed with anger. "Get back to your chores, Mr. Brady. If you really have any on this ranch. And keep out of my personal affairs."

With a shrug of distaste Matt turned and stalked out. Molly had been so absorbed she had not noticed the silent figure of Wong, the Chinese cook, who walked down the hall.

Uncle Ray's Column
By Ramon Coffman

THE Inca Indians rank among the smallest natives in the New World. Their early homeland was Peru, but they spread their power into Ecuador and Bolivia, and the northern half of Chile.

Q. Did any other tribe in South America compare in civilization with the Incas?

A. The Incas led all natives of South America, but Central America and Mexico also had advanced Indians. The Aztecs lived in Mexico, and the Mayas had their homeland in Central America, some of them moving into Yucatan, a section of southern Mexico.

Q. What were some of the remarkable things about the Incas?

A. They were the leading road-builders of the New World. Some of their narrow roads led through passes in tall mountains.

Fine cotton cloth was woven by these Indians, also a kind of wool made from the hair of alpacas and vicuñas.

When an excellent crop of maize was raised, public officers took some of the grain and placed it in storehouses. There it stayed until a crop failure occurred, when it was divided among the people.

Q. Was the llama a domestic animal among the Incas?

A. Yes, it was tamed and used as a beast of burden. A full-grown llama would carry a load up to 80 or 100 pounds.

Q. Did the Incas have a capital city?

A. Yes, the city of Cuzco (Cusco) was the center of Inca power. Built in the Andes Mountains, about 250 miles from the Peruvian coast, this city had a mighty stone wall. Much of the wall is still standing. It contains blocks which are larger and heavier than any of those used in Egyptian pyramids.

Q. What was the title of the ruler of the Incas?

A. He was known as the Inca. His empire stretched along the Pacific coast of South America for a distance of 2000 miles.

"A rocket trip to outer space is the title of a new leaflet which tells of the probable sights and sensations of a flight through the universe. For your copy send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Uncle Ray in care of the Post-Dispatch."
